THE MAD COURSE OF WESTERN PHILOSOPHY

Schizophrenia is a mental disorder which has filled the pages of psychiatric journals with tales of untold tragedy and suffering. It is a fundamental disturbance of the self leading to solipsism or to the belief that only one's mind can be known with certainty to exist. The schizophrenic has dissolved the boundaries between consciousness and reality, and descended into a world of delusion, psychosis and the perception of objects he claims are immaterial. He inserts his thoughts into his perceptions and is aware of nothing beyond his mental states. In answer to the fundamental question of what a person perceives when he looks at the world, there are two possible replies: the sane person's reply and the insane person's reply. The sane person replies that he perceives a world of physical objects, a world of tables, chairs, rivers and mountains, each of which is as it is. The sane person knows that perception is the perception of something and is not an act of self perception. The insane person's reply can be found in a book on the history of Western philosophy commencing with Rene Descartes. It can be found in a book on the history of a culture which first renounced, at the hour of its inception in the Germanic lands of Europe in 1000 AD, the Apollonian philosophy undergirding Classical Culture. While the Apollonian philosophy of the Greeks and Romans knows that man perceives physical objects and nothing else when he looks at the world, and that such a belief is the hallmark of reason, sanity and the light of the noonday sun symbolized by the god Apollo, Western philosophy knows no such thing. Embracing as its prime symbol the German sorcerer Johann Faust, who made a pact with the Devil at a crossroads, exchanging his reason and sanity for unlimited will power and subjectivity, Western culture created a philosophy which gives the insane person's answer to the question of what man perceives when he looks at the world. The pages of Western philosophy provide the answer in ways as multifarious as they are mad. They provide an answer which defines the disorder of schizophrenia and constructs a firewall of separation between ancient Classical Apollonian Culture and presently existing Western Faustian Culture, and creates the extraordinary spectacle of two diametrically opposed cultures emerging on the same continent. History has never seen anything like this anywhere else in the world.

The Sane Person's Reply. In answer to the question of what man perceives when he looks at the world, the preeminent philosopher of Classical Culture gives Apollo's answer. The philosopher Aristotle proclaims that man perceives the external objects of sense and nothing other than these. He proclaims that the power of perception does not actualize itself but is actualized by physical objects. He proclaims that the notion of subjectivism, the notion of perception perceiving only itself, is as absurd as the notion of an object bursting into flames spontaneously, without any source of ignition: "Why do we not perceive the senses themselves as well as the external objects of sense, or why without the stimulation of external objects do they not produce perception, seeing that they contain in themselves fire, earth, and all the other elements? It is clear that the power of perception is only potentially, not actually. The power of perception is parallel to what is combustible, for that never ignites itself spontaneously, but requires an agent which has the power of starting ignition; otherwise it could have set itself on fire, and would not have needed actual fire to set it ablaze." (On The Soul by Aristotle, Book II, Part 5). The Insane Person's Reply. In answer to the question of what man perceives when he looks at the world, the Faustian philosophers of the West give answers which defy the imagination and common sense of sane people. The two preeminent philosophers of the West started the train of infamous answers and what they said set the trend of the next four centuries. They were active during the Age of Enlightenment, the West's Apollo type age which accepted as axiomatic the truth that man perceives physical objects, but they were not of the age and were dedicated to its destruction, and represented a Faustian countercurrent which sought to return the West to its roots. The first antiEnlightenment subversive is revered as the Father of Modern Philosopher. Rene Descartes is not in fact the father of modern philosophy but the father of Western philosophy, because ancient philosophy, affirming that man perceives physical objects, is the product of Classical Apollonian Culture and not the West. Listen to Descartes proclaim that perception can be a source of deception and illusion. The existence of physical objects is not directly perceived or self evidently known. The world we perceive may possess no greater reality than a dream. The sole existence we can be certain of is just the existence of our own minds, and the foundation of all philosophy is the sole self evident truth that I think, therefore I am: "Seeing that our senses sometimes deceive us, I was willing to suppose that there existed nothing really such as they presented to us. And because some men err in reasoning, and fall into paralogisms, even on the simplest matters of geometry, I, convinced that I was as open to error as any other, rejected as false all the reasonings I had hitherto taken for demonstrations. And finally, when I considered that the very same thoughts (presentations) which we experience when awake may also be experienced when we are asleep, while there is at that time not one of them true, I supposed that all the objects (presentations) that had ever entered into my mind when awake, had in them no more truth than the illusions of my dreams. But immediately upon this I observed that, while I thus wished to think that all was false, it was absolutely necessary that I, who thus thought, should be something; And as I observed that this truth, I think, therefore I am, was so certain and of such evidence that no ground of doubt, however extravagant, could be alleged by the skeptics capable of shaking it, I concluded that I might, without scruple, accept it as the first principle of the philosophy of which I was in search." (Discourse On Method by Rene Descartes, Part 4). Listen to Descartes proclaim that we can doubt the existence of everything in the world, every person, place and structure before our eyes, and we can doubt the existence of our own body, without absurdity of any kind, but there is one thing we can never doubt under any circumstances, and that is the existence of our own consciousness. The foundation of all philosophy is the prior certainty of man's consciousness: "While we thus reject all of which we can entertain the smallest doubt, and even imagine that it is false, we easily indeed suppose that there is neither God, nor sky, nor bodies, and that we ourselves even have neither hands nor feet, nor, finally, a body; but we cannot in the same way suppose that we are not while we doubt of the truth of these things; for there is a repugnance in conceiving that what thinks does not exist at the very time when it thinks. Accordingly, the knowledge, I think, therefore I am, is the first and most certain that occurs to one who philosophizes orderly." (Principles Of Philosophy by Rene Descartes, Part 1, Article 7). Now listen to the words of the most influential philosopher in the West. Listen to a manifesto of schizophrenia composed at the end of the Enlightenment which disgraced the age as it returned the West to its indigenous subjectivism. Listen to Immanuel Kant proclaim his terrifying intention which sane people had to see in order to believe, an intention which would inspire mentally disordered people and movements down through the centuries with a clarion call to rise up and rampage against civilization. Listen to Kant in his Critique Of Pure Reason proclaim with the boldness and clarity of an unabashed prophet of madness: I have it found it necessary to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith. To deny knowledge: such aim encapsulates the core and essence of Western philosophy with the unashamed, unselfconscious directness marking the attitude of mental patients the world over and marking the Faustian revolt against reality. Listen to Kant proclaim that the world of objects in space and time is a fixed, implanted screen of delusion which makes knowledge of reality impossible: "Since then the power of the subject, its capacity to be affected by objects, must necessarily precede all perceptions of these objects, it can readily be understood how the form of all appearances can be given prior to all actual perceptions, and so exist in the mind apriori." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proclaim that the assumption made by all sane people that all knowledge is the knowledge of something, and all perception is the perception of something, must be rejected. It must be replaced by the opposite recognition that the perceived world revolves around the mind as mad planets revolve around a dark sun: "Hitherto it has been assumed that all our knowledge must conform to objects. But all attempts to extend our knowledge of objects by establishing something in regard to them apriori have, on this assumption, ended in failure. We must therefore find out whether we may not have more success in the tasks of metaphysics if we suppose that objects must conform to our knowledge." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proclaim that there are no such things as physical objects and what are called such are no more than subjective representations. The world is the creation of perception, reality itself is that which cannot on principle be perceived, and man is blind whenever he sees and man is blind because he has eyes: "I understand by the idealism of objects the doctrine that they are all together to be regarded as mere subjective representations and not things in themselves, and accordingly that time and space are only subjective forms of perception and not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves. To this idealism is opposed realism, which regards space and time as something given in themselves independent of our perception." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). A Church of Our Lady named Bedlam. In that place are found many men fallen out of their wit. And honestly they must kept in that place until they are restored onto their wit and are healthy again. Some must abide there forever if they have fallen so much out of themselves that they are incurable. Thus spoke William Gregory, Lord Mayor of London, in 1450, referring to the Bethlem Royal Hospital, popularly known as Bedlam, Europe's first mental hospital, founded in London 1247. Western philosophy has been a fever swamp of insanity since its inception with Descartes. Look at the swamp. See sealed, dark, stagnant waters. See blazing hot temperatures. See merciless, brazen vectors of disease. The inhabitants have brought down the doom of the West. In addition to Descartes and Kant, there is John Locke who proclaims that man perceives only ideas and reality itself is a "something I know not what." There is David Hume who proclaims that man perceives only impressions and reality itself is unknowable. There is George Berkeley who proclaims that to be is to be perceived, and without perception there is no existence. There is Gottfried Leibniz who proclaims that reality is an immaterial Monad. There is Baruch Spinoza who proclaims that reality is immaterial Nature. There is G. W. F Hegel who proclaims that reality is Absolute Idea. There is is Friedrich Nietzsche who proclaims that reality is the Will to Power. There is Karl Marx who proclaims that reality is physical process and not physical objects. There is Edmund Husserl who proclaims that reality is subjective human experience, objects and structures. There is Martin Heidegger who proclaims that reality is subjective being, time and "thereness." There is national socialism which proclaims that reality is the mystical race and the will to power. There is Han-Georg Gadamer who proclaims that reality is subjective truth, texts and methods. There is John Dewey who proclaims that reality is the product of social needs and interests. There is Ludwig Wittgenstein who proclaims that reality is a product of "language games" and "forms of life." There is Bertrand Russell who proclaims that reality is the product of propositions. There is Jacques Derrida who proclaims that reality is endlessly interpretable and deconstructible texts. There is Jurgen Habermas who proclaims that reality is a product of social consensus and communication. These are the voices of Faustian Bedlam and the riders of the Western apocalypse.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AND TRANSGENDER FREAKS ARE HERE TO STAY

Jean-Baptiste Alphonse Karr was a nineteenth century French critic, journalist and novelist. In the January 1849 issue of his journal The Wasps, he invented an epigram which would gain widespread currency as the identification of a terrifying truth. This is a truth about cultures and societies in a state of crisis and downfall. It runs as follows: the more things change, the more they remain the same. This brief, witty saying, as nightmarish as it is accurate, identifies the fact that observed social changes do not reflect reality on a deeper level, and that real social changes must be accompanied by a change of heart. In the twenty first century, this world famous saying is a specter which haunts the West on its way down. It is a voice of doom and futility proclaiming the pointlessness of attempts at reform of a culture in the death grip of moral and intellectual degeneration. It encapsulates what common sense understands, that when civilizations are rotting away due to a mass renunciation of reason, no power in heaven or on earth can reverse their course. In the twenty first century, among the symptoms of the mass renunciation of reason by the West, among the plethora of religions emerging like weeds on the morally abandoned pavements of civilization, are the most prominent, known as gender, race and class politics, and transgenderism. Rejecting the existence of real flesh and blood individuals, the Marxist religion of gender, race and class proclaims that people are phantom abstractions and exist insofar as they are members of gender, race and class groups. It proclaims that there exists no world of physical objects outside the mind and what is called reality is a construct of three gods on earth, called gender, race and class. Rejecting the findings of one hundred years of research in genetics, transgenderism proclaims that the existence of genes and chromosomes plays no role in the determination of human gender. It proclaims that the existence of an XX chromosome pair in females and an XY chromosome pair in males is irrelevant to human gender identity. It proclaims that human gender is not fixed, intrinsic, inherent or immutable as science has discovered it is, but is purely subjective and can be changed by human belief. It proclaims the following: people who believe they are members of the opposite sex are in fact members of the opposite sex; males who believe they are females are in fact females; females who believe they are males are in fact males; pretending transgender females are just as female as real biological females; and pretending transgender males are just as male as real biological males. It proclaims that pretending transgender females are entitled to enjoy the same legal rights and recognition as real biological females, as are transgender males. It proclaims that transgender females are entitled to enter spaces reserved for real biological females, such as bathrooms, shower rooms and locker rooms, and are entitled to play on women's sports teams and compete against women. In the twenty first century, these religions cannot be eradicated, because to eradicate them would necessitate eradicating the roots from which they emerged. These roots are a sickness embedded in the West as deeply as the sickness was embedded in ancient Rome during its dying centuries. It is the sickness of unreason, and in the West it has brought forth a conscious, explicit rejection of the values and ideals of the Enlightenment. A product of the West during its ancient Rome style age of decline, gender, race and class politics and transgenderism are fixed points of the cultural landscape and their monuments are among the nails in the coffin of civilization. As loud as the voices are alleging that gender, race and class politics, and transgenderism, are being successfully challenged and defeated on all fronts, they have in fact been drowned out and rendered null and void by the loud, crystal clear reality that these religions are alive and well and have not gone anywhere. They are among the flags flying aboard the Titanic ship called the West and are accompanying the West fully unfurled, flying just as high as ever, during its descent into the abyss. The gender, race and class, and transgenderist movements are as strong and powerful as they ever were, supported by over one half of the population, and their manifestos are as relevant and impactful as ever. Listen to them. They proclaim that a progressive corporation provides the strongest possible protections to employees who imagine they are members of the opposite sex. A progressive corporation grants dignity and rights to psychotic males who pretend to be females and to psychotic females who pretend to be males. A progressive corporation is a haven and sanctuary for women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders. A progressive corporation gives preferential treatment to women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders in name of equality. A progressive corporation achieves a perfect score on the index of discrimination, and with a rating of 100, is a consistent, unwavering discriminator in favor of women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders. A progressive corporation is a tribal organization which rejects the principle of individual existence, and justifies its tribalism in the name of diversity, inclusion, belonging, and the highest form of fairness and equity. A progressive corporation is an affirmative action organization which has established a class of protected groups to which it gives preferential treatment: the class of Marxist women, Marxist nonwhites, Marxist gays, Marxist lesbians, Marxist bisexuals and Marxist transgenders. A progressive corporation enforces discrimination in the name of antidiscrimination and excludes white males from its ranks. A progressive corporation enforces discrimination on the basis of race, gender and sexual orientation in the name of protecting human rights. A progressive corporation excludes white males from its ranks in the name of workplace inclusion. A progressive corporation affirms that policies of discrimination on the basis of race, gender and sexual orientation make corporations more competitive and more creative, and attract the highest talent and the broadest base of consumers. A progressive corporation a safe, caring space for same sex couples and people with mentally disordered gender identity and gender expression, people who are transitioning or have transitioned into members of the opposite sex. A progressive corporation conceals its commitment to discriminatory policies in order to avoid legal action, while just beneath the surface, under the veil of appearances and deceptions, it remains a relentless engine of subversion of Western, liberal, constitutional order: "A national rights group said Tuesday that more US companies are providing strong benefits and protections to LGBTQ+ employees despite an ongoing effort by conservative activists to get high profile brands to stop participating in the organization's annual workplace report card. The education arm of the Human Rights Campaign released its latest Corporate Equality Index the day after McDonald's became the latest big company to say it would no longer provide information for the annual evaluation of policies affecting lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender employees. Last year, Walmart, Ford, Harley-Davidson and other consumer brands that came under pressure said they would end their voluntary participation in the grading system. The HRC rated them anyway, giving Harley-Davidson a score of 10 out of 100 and Ford a 75, for example. The index has emerged as a top target of conservative activists as part of a broader campaign to pressure businesses into abandoning diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives that were designed to reduce discrimination against women, members of racial and ethnic minority groups, and LGBTQ+ people. A 2023 Supreme Court decision that declared race based affirmative action programs in college admissions unconstitutional emboldened critics of DEI programs to target universities, government agencies and corporations on social media, in the courts and in state legislatures. Some companies, including McDonald's, cited the high court precedent as their reason for curtailing diversity policies. The Human Rights Campaign Foundation said the 2025 equality index nonetheless included 72 employers that were first time participants, and that 765 of the 1,449 companies graded received a perfect score, 28% more than last year. 'At times, progress meets backlash, but companies continue to dedicate the time and resources to reinforcing workplace inclusion,' HRC President Kelley Robinson said in a statement. 'As a result, they are more competitive and more creative while attracting and retaining top talent and widening their consumer base.' The number of companies given official ratings included ones that have said they would pull out of the process. Some completed the organization's survey months before their decisions. The HRC said it would continue to monitor companies that drop out and assign them scores. McDonald's was among the companies earning the top score of 100. Walmart and Lowe's both received 90 points. The scores are based on points companies get for a range of workplace metrics, such as having antidiscrimination policies that encompass sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression, and offering health benefits that cover same sex spouses and the needs of transgender individuals. This is the second index that assigned points for having gender transition guidelines that managers, transitioning employees and their colleagues can consult. More than 1,000 of the companies graded for 2025 reported adopting such guidelines, a 21% increase, the HRC said. 'Obviously, there are plenty of examples of organizations that have made some kind of announcement around retreating from some aspects of how they were doing DEI, including things like participation in this survey,' said David Glasgow, executive director of the Meltzer Center for Diversity, Inclusion and Belonging at NYU School of Law. 'But the vast majority of companies that were doing DEI before are still doing it. The only difference is that they're changing some programs mostly for legal risk mitigation purposes and or doing it more quietly so that they don't attract as much attention and scrutiny.' " (LGBTQ+ Rights Group Reports Progress At US Companies Despite Conservative Backlash by Cathy Bussewitz). At the western entrance to the Mediterranean Sea is a monolithic limestone mountain 425 meters high. Located within the British territory of Gibraltar, it is the world famous Rock of Gibraltar and is a mighty fortress with an impenetrable labyrinth of man made tunnels. It is point of stillness and impregnability before crashing waves and stormy seas. The world of affirmative action and transgender politics is a Rock of Gibraltar before which the stormy weather alleging popular change and rejection of these is an illusion. This Rock of Gibraltar is a monument of Western cultural degeneration and a fixed signpost to moral and spiritual collapse.

RACE AND GENDER ACTIVISTS TAKE OVER SCIENCE

Stalin rolled back the planned campaign against physics and instructed Beria to give physicists some space; this led to significant advances and accomplishments by Soviet scientists in several domains. However, neither Stalin nor the subsequent Soviet leaders were able to let go of the controls completely. Government control over science turned out to be a grand failure, and the attempt to patch the widening gap between the West and the East by espionage did not help. Today Russia is hopelessly behind the West in both technology and quality of life. (The Peril Of Politicizing Science by Anna Krylov, The Journal Of Physical Chemistry, Issue 12). Ideological campaigns against truth. Government control over science. The proclamation that reality is that which is produced by the party line. Thought control is the hallmark of Marxist regimes as it is of all regimes ruled by religion, reaching back to the Dark Ages. Rejecting the method of empirical argumentation championed during the Enlightenment and the Scientific Revolution, the religious regime resorts to indoctrination and coercive persuasion in an attempt to control people's thoughts and beliefs. In the Soviet Union, fields such as genetics, cybernetics, quantum physics, relativity physics and comparative linguistics were condemned as "bourgeois pseudoscience" due to their incompatibility with Marxism and were forbidden. In the West, Marxists have launched an attack on science with the battering ram of gender, race and class politics and have broken through the gates. During the West's final age of religion which commenced in the twentieth century and has accelerated in the new millennium, neoMarxist partisans of race and gender politics have continued where the Soviets left off and placed science under the control of ideology. They have changed the original Marxist version promoted by the Soviets and substituted new master groups and new hate targets. In place of a proletarian group, the new generation of Marxists champions women and nonwhites, and their hate targets, in place of the original bourgeois, are white males. In the twenty first century, a neoMarxist monster of race and gender politics has gone on a rampage and swept away the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment which made Western science the envy of the world, and replaced them with ideological constructs whose aim is to exclude and exterminate white males. It has issued a manifesto which stands next to Marx's Communist Manifesto as a monument to hate and antienlightenment, and like its predecessor, it is rallying point for malcontents to rise up and storm the ramparts of civilization. The manifesto of the new race and gender activists proclaims that a progressive university is a campaign to rewrite history and manufacture achievements made by women and nonwhite scientists. A progressive university is a race and gender propaganda mill manufacturing great things in science, technology, engineering and mathematics women and nonwhites have done. A progressive university writes Wikipedia pages inventing accolades and awards received by women and nonwhite scientists. A progressive university demands that women and nonwhite scientists receive Nobel Prizes in proportion to their presence in the general population. A progressive university admits black Caribbean women to science, technology, engineering and medicine programs whether or not they are qualified. A progressive university discriminates in favor of women and nonwhites in its science faculties and calls its racism and sexism the achievement of diversity and equality. A progressive university hires black scientists because they are black. A progressive university hires black female physicists because they are black and female. A progressive university hires women and nonwhites in accordance with their representation in society. A progressive university reaches out to women and nonwhites in high schools and tells them that if they apply to the university, they will be granted automatic admission. A progressive university creates conferences, committees and networks of women and nonwhites to push the sexist and racist party line, manufacture outstanding scientific contributions made by women and nonwhites, and agitate for discrimination on the basis of race and gender in hiring and admissions. A progressive university awards women and nonwhite scientists major prizes and fellowships because they are women and nonwhites. A progressive university compiles a list of the 500 leading scientists in world history and fills it exclusively with women and nonwhites. A progressive university fabricates breathtaking accomplishments made by women and nonwhite scientists and deluges them with grants and recognition. A progressive university gives nominations and honors to women and nonwhite scholars because they are women and nonwhite. A progressive university manufactures brilliant scientific feats achieved by women, nonwhites and ethnic minorities and gives them senior faculty positions. A progressive university affirms that white scientists are given recognition for their achievements solely because of white privilege and not because they actually deserve the recognition. A progressive university affirms that women and nonwhites comprise a master tribe with talents and abilities inherently superior to those of white males, and this neoAryan faction alone is capable of solving the fundamental problems of mankind, such as finding sustainable materials for electronics, reversing climate change, combating antibiotic resistance, addressing probems in artificial intelligence and finding a cure for covid. A progressive university affirms the truth that good science can only be performed by women and nonwhites while bad science is the exclusive province of white males: "Since 2017, when Wade was in her late 20s, she has been campaigning tirelessly to raise the profile of female scientists and scientists of color. After realizing that many notable women working in science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) and others from minority backgrounds did not have Wikipedia pages, though they were deserving of them, she decided to start them herself, one every day. Each one takes 'a few hours' to write, she says. It’s a task, she confesses, that she somehow completes while simultaneously watching real estate shows on Netflix in the evening. To date, she has contributed more than 2,000 entries. 'I’m constantly astounded by who doesn’t have a Wikipedia page,' she says. 'You expect these people to have one, because a much less significant male counterpart would. And that’s because of who edits Wikipedia.' Every night, she still finds herself wondering: 'why is this person not on Wikipedia already?' I’m always amazed by it.' The gender gap in STEM subjects is stark. At the top of the career pyramid, women (particularly women of color) are vastly underrepresented among Nobel prize winners and professors, and at the bottom, girls (particularly from black Caribbean backgrounds) are far less likely than boys to choose STEM subjects at school. This is despite the fact that, at GCSE, A-level and as undergraduates, female students generally outperform their male peers in these subjects. Black scientists are also massively outnumbered: a recent parliamentary report found that only 8% of undergraduates, 1.4% of lecturers and postgraduates, and 0.4% of science professors living in the UK are black. This means there are just 25 black UK professors working in STEM, out of a total professorship of more than 6,600. 'I don’t even think there’s one black female physics professor in the UK,' says Wade.'If I had one big aim, it would be to make science a more inclusive and fair place to be.' As well as her Wikipedia work, she does outreach work in schools to engage young people in science and make it feel more accessible, coordinates conferences to enable underrepresented groups to network and shine a spotlight on their research, and serves on various committees that are trying to increase equality and diversity in science. Recently, she has started spending her Sunday afternoons nominating top female scientists and scientists of color for major prizes and fellowships. A leading member of 500 Woman Scientists, a grassroots organization that aims to speak up for marginalized communities in science, and with nearly 60,000 followers on X, she is connected to a huge network of scientists from underrepresented groups. She started nominating people because she got sick of seeing scientists 'doing awesome things and not getting credit for it', she says. 'Alongside Wikipedia pages and big grants, women and people of color are less likely to be nominated for–and in turn, less likely to win–big shiny awards.' I realize she is speaking from bitter experience: thanks to her work on diversity committees, she has observed this vicious circle first hand. 'I've been in places where people are like: We desperately want to give more awards to women or we really want a black scholar to win this, but we don't get nominations or applications from those particular groups.' In Wade's opinion, women and ethnic minorities are often underrepresented in senior faculty positions in science 'because they're not put forward for them or because they don't have the confidence to go for them.' She adds, pointedly: 'It's not because they're not brilliant.' The fundamental problem, Wade says, is that 'so much of science is about your privilege.' This is not just bad for science, it's bad for the survival of the planet and the human race: 'Science has so many huge open challenges–from sustainable materials for electronics to climate change, antibiotic resistance, ethical dilemmas in AI and covid–and I think we need really diverse teams working on them, to solve them and improve public trust.' " (Why Are They Not On Wikipedia?: Dr Jess Wade's Mission For Recognition For Unsung Scientists by Donna Ferguson). From the sealed, lightless, airless reading room of Karl Marx came a religion called dialectical materialism. It formed the basis of Marx's totalitarian state. It traveled down the corridors of history and landed in the Communist Bloc in the twentieth century. It outlawed the empirical method of science as being "idealistic," bourgeois," "reactionary" and "counterrevolutionary." In the twenty first century, its heirs and descendants have continued the communist campaign of repression of science. Today's race and gender activists have pushed the West into the abyss.

STATISM NOW AND FOREVER

Polaris is a star in the northern constellation of Ursa Minor. It is a famous, special star because it appears to stay fixed in the northern sky. It marks the location of the sky's north pole, the point around which the sky appears to turn. This Polaris, this North Star, is utilized by mariners and explorers the world over to find the direction north. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, the political landscape of the West has been marked by a development which cannot be reversed. It is a fixed presence, an immoveable mountain, implanted deep within the political earth by the people in successive landslide elections, and like Polaris, it shows direction. It does not show the direction northward into the outer reaches of the heavens, but downward into the depths of hell and inhumanity. Voted into power by the darkest forces known to mankind, by the voices of ignorance, envy and hatred, by those who are malcontented and disaffected, by those who reject personal responsibility, by those who fear personal freedom, by those who seek the dissolution of the self and submergence within a mystical whole, this fixed star of evil is known as statism. The political system which grants the state the power to control social, cultural and economic affairs, statism is the defining political development in the West over the past one hundred years, and is the fixed star accompanying and guiding civilization as it descends into the abyss. Statism became a fixed star during the dying centuries of ancient Rome, when it went by such names as caesarism, mobocracy, and bread and circuses, and in the West today it is the number one religion gathering the sewers and cesspools of the world as its congregation during civilization's final centuries. Statism is as irremoveable as the psychology of the masses who give it high office, and it will only disappear when the masses cease to hold political, social and cultural power. The greatest philosopher of all time, Aristotle describes the descent of democracy into a tyranny fueled by the haters, the have nots and the resentful of mankind. He describes the descent of democracy into a government and constitution of confiscation and control: "The words constitution and government have the same meaning, and the government, which is the supreme authority in states, must be in the hands of one, or of a few, or of the many. The true forms of government, therefore, are those in which the one, or the few, or the many, govern with a view to the common interest. Of forms of government in which one rules, we call that which regards the common interests, monarchy; that in which more than one, but not many, rule, aristocracy (and it is so called, either because the rulers are the best men, or because they have at heart the best interests of the state and of the citizens). But when the citizens at large administer the state for the common interest, the government is called a polity. And there is a reason for this use of language. Of the above mentioned forms, the perversions are as follows: of monarchy, tyranny; of aristocracy, oligarchy; of polity, democracy. For tyranny is a kind of monarchy which has in view the interest of the monarch only; oligarchy has in view the interest of the wealthy; democracy, of the poor: none of them the common good of all. Tyranny, as I was saying, is monarchy exercising the rule of a master over the political society; oligarchy is when men of property have the government in their hands; democracy, the opposite, when the popor, and not the men of property, are the rulers." (Politics by Aristotle, Book I). In the first decade of the twenty first century, statism in America is as alive and vigorous as ever, and no power in heaven or on earth, no Donald Trump and no Make American Great Again movement, can slay a monster which will not die. America can only become great again when it becomes free again, and this will never happen given the indelible character of the masses. America in the twenty first century is the America of the twentieth century, the America which votes for statism in overwhelming numbers, and the America which will not for psychological reasons rescind its votes. It is the America which supports government regulation of business. The America which rejects the American Dream, the traditional belief that one should work hard, and show effort and initiative, and thereby achieve upward mobility, and reject a life of idleness, sloth and government welfare dependency. The America which is antibusiness and procommunity. The America which establishes gargantuan national budgets running up record breaking, unpayable national debt in order to fund welfare entitlements. The America stricken by skyrocketing, Weimar style inflation caused by uncontrolled welfare spending, which has made the cost of living unaffordable. The America which forces consumers to pay more for imported goods through tariffs in order to support domestic industries on the grounds of social responsibility. The America which rejects less business regulation and smaller government in favor of social business and public welfare. The America which has proclaimed it is a dyed in the wool New Deal nation, Social Security nation, Great Society nation, and Affordable Care Act nation for which reductions in welfare benefits are off limits and off the table. The America which is prepared to ramp up oil and natural gas production but refuses to scale back its bloated, shameless, cradle to grave welfare regime. The America which is prepared to control its borders and deport migrant scum but refuses to bring back individual responsibility and end welfare support for its domestic scum carrying American passports, scum as far removed from true Americanism as sewers are removed from immaculate squares. The America which seeks to make government into a maximally efficient confiscation and redistribution machine, which robs without incurring excess administrative costs from the producers of wealth and lavishes the proceeds on the parasitic consumers of wealth: "Donald Trump has promised big changes for the world's largest economy. An 'end to the devastating inflation crisis,' tariffs and big cuts to taxes, regulation and the size of government are all on the agenda. This combination, he says, will ignite an economic boom and revive withering faith in the American dream. 'We're at the beginning of a great, beautiful golden age of business,' he pledged from the podium at Mar a Lago earlier this month. But looming over the president elect are warnings that many of his policies are more likely to hurt the economy than help it. And as he prepares to set his plans in motion, analysts say he is about to run into political and economic realities that will make it hard to deliver all his promises. 'There's no clear path forward at this time for how to meet all these goals because they're inherently contradictory,' said Romina Boccia, director of budget and entitlement policy at the Cato Institute. Here's a closer look at his key promises. What Trump promised: 'Prices will come down,' he said repeatedly. It was a risky pledge--prices rarely fall, unless there is an economic crisis. Inflation, which measures not price levels but the rate of price increases, has already come down significantly, while proving tough to stamp out completely. What complicates it: Trump pinned his claim to promises to expand already record US oil and gas production, reducing energy costs. But the forces that affect inflation, and energy prices, are mostly outside presidential control. To the extent that White House policies make a difference, analysts have warned that many of Trump's ideas-- including tax cuts, tariffs and migrant deportations--risk making the problem worse. Economist John Cochrane of the right leaning Hoover Institution said the big question facing the economy is how Trump will juggle 'tension' between the more traditional probusiness parts of his coalition and the 'nationalists' who are focused on issues such as border control and rivalry with China. 'Clearly both camps can't get what they want,' he said. 'That's going to be the fundamental story and that's why we don't know what's going to happen.' What Trump promised: He has put forward a growth plan--lower taxes, less regulation and a smaller government, which he says will unleash American business. What complicates it: But analysts say cutting regulation might take longer than expected. And Trump is widely expected to prioritize extending expiring tax cuts above cutting spending. Ms Boccia of the Cato Institute said she expected borrowing to surge under the Trump administration and the rise to add to inflation pressures. In financial markets, those concerns have already helped to drive up interest rates on government debt in recent weeks, she noted. Though Trump will also face some resistance from those inside his party worried about already high US debt, Ms Boccia said extending the tax cuts--projected to add more than $4.5tn to US debt over the next decade--seemed all but certain. By contrast, Trump ruled much of the budget off limits during his campaign when he promised to leave big programs, such as Social Security, unchanged. The socalled Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) led by Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy has also publicly scaled back its ambitions." (Has Trump Promised Too Much On US Economy? by Nathalie Sherman). In the first decade of the twenty first century, statism in the West is as fixed and unchanging as the North Star and serves as a signpost signaling the futility of all attempts to return the West to the Enlightenment. Across the West the hand of state censors is hard at work. Breaking into private businesses, it polices private thoughts and private speech in a campaign to make the people march in ideological lockstep. Labor governments, Conservative governments, Democrat governments, Republican governments, and governments held to occupy all points on the political spectrum, when in actual fact they occupy but one point and one point alone, the far left point, have cracked down on the voices of politically incorrect dissent. Criticisms of transgenderism, black supremacy, radical feminism, gay politics, lesbian politics, doomsday environmentalism, open borders, mass migration, multiculturalism, and Islamic tyranny, crime and terror are not be aired, spoken, mentioned or discussed in the twenty first century, mob backed, totalitarian regime of the West: "British pubs could soon be forced to police the speech of customers on contentious issues such as transgenderism and religion in the latest crackdown on the institution by the leftist Labor government. Under plans to supposedly protect workers in customer facing jobs, such as pub staff, the Labor government of Prime Minister Sir Keir Starmer has proposed reforms mandating employers protect workers from harassment by 'third parties,' such as customers. The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) watchdog has warned that impending 'worker's rights' legislation threatens to 'disproportionately curtail' freedom of speech, the Times of London reported." ('Every Pub A Parliament' Under Threat: Discussion Of Transgenderism, Religion Could Be Banned In British Boozers by Kurt Zindulka). In the late 1800s in New York City, an idiom came into being from the struggles of reformers to defeat a powerful, corrupt political organization known as Tammany Hall. You Can't Fight City Hall explained all unsuccessful attempts to defeat this fearsome political machine. Achieving widespread currency, You Can't Fight City Hall came to refer to the futility of all attempts to defeat reigning, entrenched political regimes and orthodoxies. You Can't Fight City Hall: the answer and reproach to all those imagining they can halt and reverse the march of statism during the postEnlightenment age of the West.

MARXIST SCHOOLMASTERS SHUTTER CLASSROOMS

During the first centuries of Jesuit education, a catchphrase by Father Juan Bonifacio SJ captured the spirit animating the enthusiasm of Jesuits for education: 'The education of youth is the renewal of the world.' Jesuits were convinced that the aim of education was to form people of upright character who could work tirelessly for the common good of society as a service to God. (On The Occasion Of The 6th International Day Of Education–24 January 2024 by Jose Mesa). The aim of education is the programming of students. Schools should build upright character which means religious character. Education should mold children to be servants of God. The religious indoctrination of children came into the world with the Catholic Church during the Dark Ages of the West. It sought to cripple young developing minds by exposing them to the tenets of faith unsupported by reason, sanity or the evidence of the senses. Pioneered by the Jesuits, this form of child abuse would reappear down through the centuries under new flags and new colors. These new versions were secularized versions of Christianity, while the criminal aim continued unaltered and unabated. The new forms of child indoctrination proceeded from Marxism and its derivatives and offshoots. Indoctrination in the belief in a mystical God in Heaven was replaced by indoctrination in the primacy of mystical social groups on earth, and an attack on the Age of Enlightenment was launched on behalf of gender, race, class, sexual orientation and indigenous rights politics, tribal factions multiplying in the Marxist universe of hate. The twentieth century saw children's minds deformed by national socialist race Marxists operating in Germany during the Third Reich, by the school propaganda organs of the Communist Bloc, and by the followers of John Dewey's Progressivism which proclaimed that the purpose of education is to teach children to serve the needs and interests of society. The twenty first century has seen Marxists at work mass producing a new generation of Manchurian candidates waiting to be activated and assault truth and objectivity. Masquerading as pedagogues, Marxist propagandists in the twenty first century have issued a manifesto of child disfigurement which has hurled liberal, academic education in the West into the dustbin of history. They proclaim that a progressive school system promotes racism and sexism to children, promotes preferential treatment for women and nonwhites, and justifies its philosophy of discrimination in the name of diversity, inclusion, and the highest form of fairness and equity. A progressive school system teaches a curriculum composed by theologians of the far left. A progressive school system rejects traditional instruction in academic subjects, such as mathematics, reading, writing, science and social studies, in favor of inculcation in the tenet of Marxist orthodoxy. A progressive school system affirms that parents have no right to determine their children's education but only the state has a right, and must ensure that students are well versed in Marxist politics and ideology. A progressive school system promotes the religion of transgenderism. According to this, human gender is not determined by genes as science has discovered, but is determined by human belief; people who believe they are members of the opposite sex are in fact such members; people can change their genders multiple times as they change their beliefs; and people who have transitioned by their beliefs into the opposite gender are called transgender individuals, and a transgender male or female is just as real as a biological male or female. A progressive school system is a department of Marxist agitprop and mind control. A progressive school system encourages disturbed children who believe they are members of the opposite sex to do the impossible and change their sex, and does not tell the parents about their children's mental state. A progressive school system promotes psychotic, impossible gender transitions by students behind the backs of their parents. A progressive school system condemns as domestic terrorists parents who defend traditional liberal education and locks them up for life. A progressive school system is run by Marxist school boards and teachers' unions dedicated to producing student activists. A progressive school system promotes critical race theory to students. According to this, progressive politics is based on criticism of the Enlightenment notions of truth and objectivity, and is the politics of black socialism, black communism, black fascism and the black will to power. A progressive school system teaches students that capitalism is a regime of racial disparity and discrimination against blacks. A progressive school system teaches students that capitalism is a regime of police brutality against blacks. A progressive school system rejects the traditional aim of education to transmit knowledge and is run on Marxist time, money and policies. A progressive school system defines teachers' professional development as gaining proficiency in techniques of ideological programming and coercive persuasion. A progressive school system emphasizes high grades and test scores in Marxist subversion at the expense of academic grades. A progressive school system has replaced traditional academic subjects with Marxist ideological subjects. A progressive school system forces students to participate in Marxist projects and tell their teachers that leisure time activities performed by whites are inherently racist. A progressive school system is run by teachers, principals, committees, decision making bodies and district administrations which peddle the spectrum of Marxist dogmas, and promote race, gender, sexual and political content calling for the destruction of civilization: "For many parents, the COVID-19 lockdowns opened a window into their children's schools, making it suddenly apparent that lessons on race, gender and diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) were taking precedence over education at a time when test scores were plummeting and students were struggling. Now, with far left ideology becoming increasingly prevalent and test scores remaining at an all time low, parents are looking to the incoming Trump Administration to refocus public schools, drive divisive content out of curriculum and equip parents with more rights over their children's education. A recent poll by Parents Defending Education (PDE), which opposes the far left orthodoxy taking over many schools, found that 90% of parents surveyed believe schools would be greatly improved by simply focusing on the core subjects, such as math, reading, writing, science and social studies. About 52% of parents support making cuts to the Department of Education, with 77% advocating for the department to allow states more flexibility with how they run their school districts. 'This poll shows overwhelming opposition to school personnel withholding information from parents about their child's gender identity at school,' Erika Sanzi, director of outreach at PDE, said in a statement. 'This matters because the policies propagated by activist groups, the National School Boards Association and teachers' unions all allow for—and often require—the deliberate deception of parents by school staff if that is what the minor child wants. It's refreshing to see even more confirmation that people think this ubiquitous trend of facilitating gender transitions behind the backs of parents is complete madness and needs to stop.' Part of the president elect's education agenda includes increased parental involvement and the eradication of critical race theory (CRT), gender ideology and DEI initiatives from schools. Trump has promised to return the purpose of schools to education, focusing on reading, writing and math 'so that America's young people have the knowledge, skills, and training they need to get a great job and lead a successful career.' Living near Minneapolis, Minnesota around the time of George Floyd's death and the subsequent racial protests, Tooien said schools in her area began 'very quickly and quietly' passing policies meant 'to address racial disparity [and] equity initiatives.' 'You can look at everything from policy to curriculum to professional development, and there was a very quick, hyperaccelerated shift toward the time and the money in our school budgets that need to be spent on equity initiatives and things that really have very little to nothing to do with direct instruction or any sort of core academic subjects, and the test scores reflect that,' Tooien told the DCNF. Lori Gimelshteyn, a mother of two from Colorado, noticed that as her kids' school began offering more services, such as expanding its healthcare center, its focus began shifting away from its main purpose: education. Not only was the school pushing ideology onto children, she said, but it was happening at the expense of their grades. Parents also took issue with the administration's entrenchment of critical race theory and gender ideology within elementary curriculum. Gimelshteyn told the DCNF her son was once forced to complete a school project which asked students, 'Why is your favorite hobby racist?' 'I said to my son, You're going to get an F on this paper before you lie,' Gimelshteyn said. 'And he looked at me and he said, Mom, you don't understand. I have think one way at home and another way at school.' 'And so I did what every parent should do when there's a concern, is go to the teacher,' Gimelshteyn continued. 'And then I realized that the teacher is not going to resolve it, then I spoke to the principal. Then I went to the school board and district administration. Come to find out the whole entire school was complicit. This isn't just one rogue teacher, this is an entire administration.' " (Parents Are Chomping At The Bit To Retake America's Classrooms With Trump's Imminent Return by Jaroud Crouson). In the twenty first century, Western schools have become Marxist versions of Sunday Schools, Hebrew Schools and Madrassahs. Offering prayers and sacrifices to the gods of proletarian dictatorship, critical race theory, radical feminism, gay and lesbian politics, transgender ideology and indigenous rights, Western schools have transformed normal human children into walking rifles and placed civilization within their crosshairs.

RADICAL AMERICA MARCHES ON WASHINGTON

On January 20, 2025 in Washington DC, Donald Trump was inaugurated as forty seventh president of the United States. A centrist president, dedicated to combating the extra growths and excrescences of the radical left, from transgenderism to affirmative action to open borders, Trump is fiercely opposed by one half of the American electorate. Ahead of his inauguration and on the day of the event, the voices of this one half converged on the nation's capital and reminded the other half and reminded the world of the present day reality which is America. They reminded onlookers across the nation and across the world that America is a sinking ship torpedoed by the enemies of freedom, and that Donald Trump will only buy time for a republic subverted from within by its people. These voices of the other America were on full display in Washington and waved flags and colors representing every point in the spectrum of the radical left revolt against the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment. The spectrum was the dark light of totalitarian government shining upon America, showing that Benjamin Franklin's famous warning issued over two centuries before had terrifyingly come true. On September 17, 1787, on the final day of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, Franklin was asked by Elizabeth Willing Powell, "Well, doctor, what do we have now, a republic or a monarchy?" Franklin replied, "A republic, if you can keep it." In the twenty first century, America has not kept its republic but descended into the fever swamps of a regulatory welfare state and become unrecognizable. The swamp began to fill in the early years of the twentieth century with the enactment of statism under the guises of Progressivism and the New Deal. In the 1960s, it began rising under the guises of the New Frontier and the Great Society. In the twenty first century, it began to fill to overflowing under the guises of a Kinder, Gentler Nation, the Third Way, Compassionate Conservatism, Yes, We Can!, Hope and Change, the Affordable Care Act and Build Back Better. At the time of the second inauguration of Donald Trump as forty seventh president of the United States, it has flooded the nation and placed constitutional government permanently underwater. The submerged wreckage of freedom was celebrated by radical America in the run up to Donald Trump's swearing in and on the day, and this other America's manifesto, composed over the course of a century and fully enacted into law, custom and the national ethos at the present time, was shouted through the megaphones of the thousands of protesters assembled. The manifesto is the populist grave marker of America's liberal order, a tombstone chiseled out by the masses signifying the burial of freedom. It is the final statement of a nation which no longer is a republic but a mobocracy over which Donald Trump presides as an interloper, installed into power by the electoral college, but unwanted by 48 million people or fifty percent of the voters. The twenty first century manifesto of the new American breeding ground of moral disease proclaims that a progressive society is a women's march against capitalism. A progressive society is a socialist organization peddling totalitarian tyranny under the guise of liberalism. A progressive society is a People's March against individual rights. A progressive society supports the rights of transgender individuals who proclaim they are members of the opposite sex because they believe they are members, notwithstanding the presence of genes which determine their actual gender. A progressive society promotes militant gay and lesbian politics. A progressive society is a democratic socialist society which has established universal slavery by the unanimous consent of the people. A progressive society is a proPalestinian society which supports jihdist terror and seeks to destroy Israel because it is a free society. A progressive society is an open borders society which serves as a sanctuary and refuge for the moral sewers of the world. A progressive society has enacted communism as the highest form of democracy. A progressive society seeks to dismantle modern industrial and technological civilization in the name of fighting climate change. A progressive society condemns capitalism is a regime of militarism. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime which keeps blacks and hispanics in the grip of fear. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime of fascist repression. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime of injustice. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime burning with hate. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime of mass incarceration of blacks. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime of police brutality. A progressive society condemns capitalism as a regime of global colonialism and imperialism. A progressive society is a left wing society which shuts down freedom of thought and speech. A progressive society is an online and offline social media platform for the promotion of gender, race and class politics. A progressive society is class war society which has exterminated billionaires. A progressive society is a movement of resistance against capitalism. A progressive society is a rally for leftist causes which silences the liberal opposition. A progressive society establishes communist totalitarianism in the name of combating fascism. A progressive society is run by communist corporations such as Ben and Jerry's whose motto is People and Planet Before Individual Freedom. A progressive society promotes a single recurring topic, subject and idea: the primacy of social groups over the rights, freedoms and dignity of the individual. A progressive society is festooned from street corners to rooftops with the flags and colors of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender ideologies signifying a Marxist assault on liberal values. A progressive society is a sound stage for Marxist rabble rousers amplifying the voices of envy and discontent across the nation. A progressive society is an anticapitalist, antiliberal, antiindustrial, antiTrump protest movement spraying graffiti and bullets on the walls of Enlightenment civilization: "What began in January 2017 as the Women's March morphed into a smorgasbord of liberal [leftist], progressive [leftist], and socialist groups rebranded as the People's March ahead of President Elect Donald Trump's inauguration. Proabortion protesters joined arms with leftists of all kinds to march on Washington, D.C., two days before Donald Trump's 2025 inauguration. The Women's March, organized in 2017 to protest Donald Trump's first inauguration, invited LGBTQIA, Democratic Socialists, ProPalestinian, open borders, antimilitarism, Democracy, and climate change promoters in the rebranded People's March. They professed to meld prochoice advocates with union supporters and 'Black and Brown people from everywhere most impacted by a system that doesn't keep them safe, Police Brutality, Mass Incarceration and colonization,' among other left wing progressives. Speakers took aim at Elon Musk for his prodemocracy efforts to restore freedom of speech on the social media platform X.com. One protester carried a sign saying, 'Make Billionaires Extinct Again.' Thousands marched to the Lincoln Memorial from three locations in the nation's capital. Kick off stations were located in downtown Washington, DC: Farragut Square, McPherson Square, and Franklin Park. The core purpose of the march was to protest Trump's 'fascist' and regressive policies. People's March participants carried signs that said, 'We Won't Go Back,' 'When INJUSTICE Becomes Law, RESISTANCE Becomes Duty, and 'Hate Will Not Make Us Great' placards. There were what appeared as a handful of prolife protesters near the main stage for the rally, but they were accosted and silenced by advocates for the myriad of other leftist causes. Antifascist leftists accosted prolife activist Seth Drayer of CreatedEqual.org. After other prochoice protesters attempted to cover his antiabortion sign, the antifascists spray painted his sign. DC Metro police arrived a few minutes later and gathered information about the assault. Only two American flags were visible at the march in the nation's capital. One of those flew upside down. Another flew atop an LGTBQ+flag. The crowd of a reported 25,000 protesters was predominantly white and appeared to be primarily proabortion advocates. The rally seemed to be well funded, with a seating area and an extensive sound stage for speakers. a Ben & Jerry's tent stood conspicuously in the crowd. One person seemed to summarize the rally's theme while wearing multiple symbols of the various antiTrump groups." (Conglomeration Of AntiTrump Leftists March On Washington Mall Ahead Of Inauguration by Lana Shadwick). Look at radical America on Inauguration Day 2025 and see Marxist protesters wield the fearsome symbol of their creed. See them hold a monstrous weapon of their war. As its heavy blade slides down the grooves, this tool of execution opens up the nightmare world of the radical left. It is a world of gender, race and class violence. A world of black masks, black clothing, black anarchy and blood flowing through the streets. A world of revolution against the West and revolution now: "A group of leftist protesters showed up in Washington DC, on Monday, bringing with them a grim device for their demonstration as President Donald Trump was sworn in a second time. Some individuals in the group of about 250 to 300 were seen gathered around a fake guillotine, a machine historically used for beheadings, in the area known as Meridian Hill, or Malcolm X park, according to Breitbart News. The words Come Get Sum were written on the guillotine while a person wearing black clothing and a black mask stood next to it. The guillotine's blade appeared to have red paint on its blade to look like blood. Another individual standing nearby held a sign that read, The Revolution Is Now." ('Come Get Sum': AntiTrump Protesters Erect Mock Guillotine On Inauguration Day by Amy Furr). Dry rot is wood decay caused by a fungus which digests the parts of the wood giving it strength. The orange dust and fruiting bodies produced by the fungus are visible to the eye. Donald Trump is prepared to eradicate the visible moral rot afflicting America but cannot eradicate the inner moral rot and deep manifestations. He cannot repeal the American regulatory welfare state built up by popular demand since the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt. All of America stands behind this one hundred year old regime, while the radical half additionally stands behind its twenty first century gender, race and class manifestation. The spores of moral rot continue to multiply and germinate within the nation. In the twenty first century, this nation, this mighty tree, this American house of freedom, has collapsed.

MIGRANT FIRES ENGULF THE WEST

Le Suicide by Edouard Manet. The kamikaze, Japanese air units flying suicide attacks against the Allies during World War II. The Ludovisi Gaul, a Roman statue depicting a Gallic man committing suicide as he holds up the dead body of the wife he killed. The Death Of Seneca by Luca Giordarno, depicting the suicide of Seneca the Younger in ancient Rome. The September 11, 2001 kamikaze type suicide bombing attacks carried out by the Islamic terror group Al Qaeda against America. These are scenes of suicide, the act of intentionally causing one's own death, and this act of personal finality and termination has been present in ages and cultures the world over since time immemorial. Its reasons can be sound or unsound depending upon the circumstances, and sound reasons include the desire to terminate a life racked by physical pain, and to terminate a life lived as a slave under unconscionable state tyranny. A civilization commits suicide when the majority abandons its defining beliefs and code of values. History is replete with civilizations committing suicide, and depending upon the nature of the civilization, the act can be good or evil. Good suicide occurred in East Germany in 1989 when the people staged the famous Peaceful Revolution and overthrew the Berlin Wall, the Iron Curtain and the lash of communist slavery under which they suffered. Evil suicide occurred in ancient Rome when mobs led by Caesar voted to abolish the constitutional Republic of freedom and virtue, and launch a proletarian class war of expansive bread doles and degenerate circuses. Evil suicide occurred in Germany in 1933 when the people voted to abolish the liberal Weimar Republic and install into power a neoMarxist regime peddling race socialism. Evil suicide occurred throughout the West in the twentieth century when nation after nation abandoned liberal democracy and voted to establish social democracy and a comprehensive, regulatory welfare state. In the twenty first century, evil suicide has again occurred throughout the West as nation after nation has voted to allow unassimilated migrants to multiply like a cancer within its midst. This cancer of enemy aliens has been allowed to grow and flourish by means of an earlier suicide. The people of Europe and America first committed suicide by voting into power Marxism and its variants, and now the new Marxist and neoMarxist majorities have joined forces with migrants in a movement championing multiculturalism, antiWesternism and antiEnlightenment. The new radical majorities have given orders to the political establishment to dissolve national borders and open up the gates of civilization to the migrant enemy from without. The new Marxist majorities have issued a manifesto for the barbarization of the West in a campaign to overthrow liberal capitalist Enlightenment institutions. The Western Marxists of the twenty first century proclaim that a progressive society is a radical stage, show, exhibition and guerrilla theater. A progressive society is a welcome center for migrant fifth columns masquerading as innocent refugees. A progressive society is run by academics, activists and Red Cross officials seeking to settle as many migrants as they can and overwhelm law abiding neighborhoods. A progressive society is a conference promoting the right of migrants to take over streets, families, homes and offices. A progressive society is a colony of Africa serving a global empire of anticivilization. A progressive society is a venue of migrant violence and organized crime. A progressive society is an unclean animal shelter for migrant predators. A progressive society is invaded, occupied and lorded over by migrants. A progressive society is run by socialist councils letting in migrants by the millions. A progressive society promotes migrant culture in the name of centrism. A progressive society is morally and financially bankrupt due to its unconditional support for migrants. A progressive society is a cesspool of Algerian migrants, crime, cannabis, turf wars and terror in the streets. A progressive society greenlights migrant vandalism of offices and shops. A progressive society allows migrants to live, eat and sleep in the streets. A progressive society clothes, houses and feeds migrants for life. A progressive society is a migrant collective whose members work together to undermine the lives of decent, honest, productive citizens. A progressive society sanctions rampant migrant law breaking. A progressive society abolishes migrant control measures and establishes open borders in the name of fighting racism and colonialism. A progressive society is a demonstration and protest group directed against liberal law and order. A progressive society is an uncontrolled migrant mob rampaging through public markets and squares. A progressive society is a megaphone of migrant bigotry, intolerance and calls for war. A progressive society is an assembly of migrant revolutionaries blocking the arteries of modern life and marching on Western capital cities. A progressive society bangs migrant drums of moral degeneracy. A progressive society shouts migrant slogans of moral subversion. A progressive society is an indoor and outdoor area dedicated to waging migrant wars against the West, wars produced, directed, acted in and starring a devil known as Marxism, Africa, Asia, Arabia and Latin America: "A theatre in Paris which is known for its radical shows and exhibitions has been occupied by more than 250 African migrants after they were let in for a free event five weeks ago. The Gaite Lyrique theater in Paris staged the conference, entitled Reinventing The Welcome For Refugees In France, on December 10. It involved talks hosted by academics from top universities and Red Cross officials, and saw activists welcome in the migrants. But when the conference was finished, the migrants, who mainly come from France's former west African colonies, refused to leave the venue. Still occupied, the leftist theatre now faces going out of business after weeks without revenue from ticket sales, and has had to cancel all performances until at least January 24. Its management said in a statement last week that the number of people taking shelter in the theatre is 'continuing to increase' and has swelled to around 300 people. 'The sanitary conditions are deteriorating day after day and the teams are facing this situation alone,' it said as it called for the local authorities to find a housing solution for the occupiers. 'Although this occupation is forced, it is unthinkable for the Gaite Lyrique to throw these people out onto the street in the middle of winter,' the statement added. Paris's Socialist led council, which owns the building, claims it has looked for accommodation for the migrants but that none was available. It has called for the government to deal with the problem, but President Macron's centrist cabinet is said to have ignored the request and is reluctant to get involved in the debacle. The estimated the cost of the cancellations of private and public events has been estimated to stand at 'several hundred thousand euros in direct losses', a theatre spokesperson said last month. The theatre's income model--which is 70 per cent based on ticket sales and 30 per cent on subsidies--has collapsed. Local businesses have also complained of losses due to the occupation. The bistro next to the 19th century venue, a popular spot for theatregoers to eat and drink before and after shows, has reported €30,000 in lost revenue so far. 'They are ruining my business,' the manager Elia, herself the daughter of Algerian migrants, told The Times. 'They hang around outside my terrace, smoking joints and fighting among themselves. Not only do we no longer get theatregoers because the theatre is shut but we don't get passers by either. They're being frightened away by all these young men. 'The migrants all claim to be under age 18, meaning they would be considered unaccompanied minors and given the right to be housed and assisted by local authorities. But local officials have insisted that they are adults and that most are known to the authorities and had been sleeping on the streets before entering the theatre. 'This is an illegal occupation of a building by recognized migrants,' the regional authorities said in December. The Collectif des Jeunes du Parc de Belleville, the group which organized the occupation, slammed the age test as 'racist and expeditive'. Named after the Paris park they previously occupied, the protest group described the theatre occupation as a focal point for their 'antiracist and anticolonial struggle'. There have been daily demonstrations on the steps of the theatre since the occupation began. Videos show huge crowds gathering at the 'general assemblies', which begin with drums being banged and slogans blared through megaphones as they block entry to the theatre." (French Leftist Theatre Faces Bankruptcy After Opening Its Doors To 250 African Migrants For A Free Show And They Refused To Leave And Remain In The Building Five Weeks Later by Elena Salvoni). Look at the West in the twenty first century and see immigration policies unleash migrant stampedes trampling over sanity and common sense. See a migrant revolution against free societies. See illegal entry legalized and migrant criminals granted immunity from prosecution. See national borders dissolved and national emergencies declared as migrants overwhelm cities and states. See migrants caught, released and allowed to remain in the West, and a conflagration of migrant violence ignite which no troops, laws or executive orders can extinguish: "President Donald Trump will declare a national emergency at the southern border, he announced Monday during his inaugural address in the US Capitol rotunda. Trump wielded the critical issue of border security with incredible effectiveness during his campaign against Vice President Kamala Harris, and his policy heavy inaugural speech made clear he will move swiftly to act on his campaign promises. 'Today, I will sign a series of historic executive orders,' Trump said. 'With these actions, we will begin the complete restoration of America and the revolution of common sense. It’s all about common sense.' He continued, 'First, I will declare a national emergency on our southern border. All illegal entry will immediately be halted and we will begin the process of returning millions and millions of criminal aliens back to the places from which they came. We will reinstate my Remain in Mexico policy, I will end the practice of catch and release, and I will send troops to the southern border to repel the disastrous invasion of our country.' " (President Donald Trump Declares National Emergency At Southern Border by Bradley Jaye). Three quarters of a million people commit suicide every year. Suicide is a global phenomenon occurring in all income, educational and occupational categories. Its leading cause is mental disorder. In the twenty first century, a moral disorder engulfed the West. It loaded a rifle with bullets marked Marxism, migrant gangs, migrant networks and migrant terror, and pulled the trigger on itself.

TRUMP FREES POLITICAL PRISONERS

January 6, 2021, Washington DC. A crowd of freedom fighters led by Donald Trump storms the United States Capital Building in an attempt to prevent a joint session of Congress from counting fraudulent Electoral College votes and formalizing the victory of Joe Biden. It attempts to stage an insurrection and overthrow a criminal government which had rigged the 2020 presidential election. The theft of the election was the greatest crime ever committed against a democracy in modern times, and a tragedy of gargantuan proportions because the crime felled the former arsenal and watchtower of the free world. The 2020 presidential election was rigged by Mark Zuckerberg, Chief Executive Office of Meta, who obeyed orders from Biden and injected 420 million dollars into Biden's Political Action Committees for the purpose of changing voting laws to favor Biden and installing Biden operatives in local governments to serve as recorders of votes. It was rigged by Zuckerberg who obeyed orders from Biden to suppress news stories on Facebook revealing the existence of incriminating emails stored in Hunter Biden's laptop. These emails established the existence of an influence peddling operation run by Biden while he was vice president, selling access to his office. The election was rigged by tens of millions of computer votes manufactured for Biden. It was rigged by changes to election procedures, such as abolishing signature verification requirements, without constitutionally mandated approvals by state legislatures. It was rigged by Biden operatives who stuffed tens of thousands of votes into duffel bags and placed them on park benches. It was rigged by third parties harvesting votes for Biden. It was rigged by tens of thousands of votes pulled out of boxes and suitcases hidden under tables at polling stations. The United States Supreme Court refused to hear states' challenges to the election on grounds of lack of standing, despite the fact that the Court has a duty to ensure the right to vote in free and fair elections, and thus the duty to recognize a public interest standing of any state to sue. Vice President Mike Pence refused to perform the selfsame duty as the Court to ensure the right to vote in free and fair elections, refused to send the Electoral College votes back to states for recertification, and refused to allow the states to revote. Having tried all peaceful means to ensure a free and fair election, patriotic Americans were left with no alternative but to seek redress by the forcible overthrow of a government which had descended into lawlessness. The attempted insurrection commenced at noon and ended without success at 6 pm, but it forced the certification of Biden to be postponed to January 7. Donald Trump succeeded in doing something which no freedom fighters in the history of the nation had ever succeeded in doing; he succeeded in stopping the operations of a criminal government for twenty four hours; and this constitutes his greatest legacy, a legacy which places him next to the nation's Founding Fathers as a defender of freedom. Stopping the operations of the federal government for twenty four hours, Donald Trump gave the nation twenty four hours of something it had not enjoyed for over a century. He gave the nation twenty four hours of freedom from one hundred years of federal government regulatory, welfare state, election stealing tyranny. Led by Trump, 1,600 freedom fighters, whose ranks included the Proud Boys and the Oath Keepers, militia groups dedicated to establishing freedom by force of arms when peaceful means of redress have failed, stormed the United States Capital Building. They vandalized and looted a criminal government's stolen property. They assaulted a criminal government's hoodlums masquerading as capital police officers; the badges the hoodlums were wearing served as shields for murder and mayhem; and the insurrectionists assaulted far left journalists who were working with the police. The insurrectionists occupied chambers and offices of disgrace, housing the senators and representatives of federal tyranny together with their support staff, and occupied the offices of the head criminal of the House of Representatives, and the third most powerful person in the federal government, Nancy Pelosi. During the attempted insurrection, the capital police hoodlums killed freedom fighter Ashli Babbit as she was attempting to enter and liberate the Speaker's Lobby. Her death on the field of battle made her the preeminent hero, symbol and martyr of the insurrectionist movement. On the day before her death, she proclaimed the advent of a storm of rectitude and a light of truth which would sweep away one hundred years of treason: "Nothing will stop us. They can try and try and try but the storm is here and it is descending upon DC in less than 24 hours. Dark to light!" The attempted insurrection and stoppage of the federal government was America's Warsaw Ghetto moment. In the largest Jewish ghetto during World War II, established in 1940 by German occupied Poland, Jews staged a revolt in 1943 to oppose Germany's attempt to transport them to the gas chambers of Majdanek and Treblinka. The Jews built bunkers and used guns and bombs against the Germans. Twenty nine days after the revolt commenced, on April 19, 1943, it was suppressed, on May 16, 1943, but the brave Jews who fought had given themselves twenty nine days of freedom. From January 6 to January 7, 2025, 1,600 brave Americans gave the nation twenty four hours of surcease of a one hundred year old, federal regulatory, welfare state, election stealing leviathan. On January 20, 2025, on his first day in office, Donald Trump issued a proclamation releasing all the insurrectionists from jail. He issued a proclamation reversing a miscarriage of justice perpetrated by the establishment. He issued a proclamation affirming a principle known by civilized people for thousands of years, a principle contained in America's Declaration Of Independence, the principle that insurrection is justified when tyranny cannot be overthrown by peaceful means, the principle that violence is the necessary language of the unheard: "This proclamation ends a grave national injustice that has been perpetrated upon the American people over the last four years and begins a process of national reconciliation.

Acting pursuant to the grant of authority in Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, I do hereby:

(a) commute the sentences of the following individuals convicted of offenses related to events that occurred at or near the United States Capitol on January 6, 2021, to time served as of January 20, 2025:

- Stewart Rhodes
- Kelly Meggs
- Kenneth Harrelson
- Thomas Caldwell
- Jessica Watkins
- Roberto Minuta
- Edward Vallejo
- David Moerschel
- Joseph Hackett
- Ethan Nordean
- Joseph Biggs
- Zachary Rehl
- Dominic Pezzola
- Jeremy Bertino

(b) grant a full, complete and unconditional pardon to all other individuals convicted of offenses related to events that occurred at or near the United States Capitol on January 6, 2021;

The Attorney General shall administer and effectuate the immediate issuance of certificates of pardon to all individuals described in section (b) above, and shall ensure that all individuals convicted of offenses related to events that occurred at or near the United States Capitol on January 6, 2021, who are currently held in prison are released immediately. The Bureau of Prisons shall immediately implement all instructions from the Department of Justice regarding this directive. I further direct the Attorney General to pursue dismissal with prejudice to the government of all pending indictments against individuals for their conduct related to the events at or near the United States Capitol on January 6, 2021. The Bureau of Prisons shall immediately implement all instructions from the Department of Justice regarding this directive. IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this twentieth day of January, in the year of our Lord two thousand twenty-five, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and forty ninth." (Granting Of Pardons And Commutation Of Sentences For Certain Offenses Relating To The Events Relating To The Events At Or Near The United States Capital On January 6, 2021). In 1776, thirteen colonies in the New World rebelled against the mighty British Empire. They protested against tea and paper taxes levied from London, launched a war of independence, and fought to build a nation founded on the primacy of the individual. Fighting bravely for their freedom, America's revolutionaries approved the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. Over the past one hundred years, the fireworks and parades celebrating this day have become meaningless. On January 6, 2021, a crowd of patriotic Americans attempted an insurrection to restore their meaning and resurrect the nation's founding principles. They failed in their attempt, were sent to jail, and became the nation's political prisoners. On January 25, 2025, Donald Trump freed them.

JOE BIDEN: PRESIDENT OF TREASON

This monument was erected under the patronage of the State of Connecticut in the 55th year of the Independence of the USA in memory of the brave patriots massacred at Fort Griswold near this spot on the 6th of Sept. AD 1781, when the British, under the command of the Traitor Benedict Arnold, burnt the towns of New London and Groton and spread desolation and woe throughout the region. (Dedication plaque on Groton Monument in Groton, Connecticut) Traitor Benedict Arnold: American military officer during the American Revolutionary War who defected to the British in 1780. Traitor Benedict Arnold: led British forces in the Battle of Groton Heights on September 6, 1781 in which the British captured Fort Griswold and massacred the American defenders after they had surrendered. Traitor Benedict Arnold: his name is the supreme synonym in America for treason and betrayal of the nation. Two and a half centuries after this dark figure led British forces against an army he had once commanded and against a new nation he had once sworn to protect, he has risen from his resting place at Saint Mary's Church in Battersea. He has risen in spirit and soul and reentered the nation whose people he had betrayed. He has traveled to the nation's capital and entered the body of a former president of the United States. Under Benedict Arnold's tutelage, this former president, while he was in office, committed acts of treason which defy the imagination, committed the greatest acts of treason ever committed in the history of the nation, continued where Arnold left off when America had just been born, and continued bigger and better than Arnold, rewriting the book of American treason. This protege of Benedict Arnold is Joe Biden, forty sixth president of the United States, and he has multiplied Arnold's massacre of Americans at Groton a thousand fold as he has massacred the name and reputation of his nation as the world's arsenal of freedom. Killing Americans and killing America, Joe Biden serves as a symbol and embodiment of the path of treason the nation has itself walked down over a one hundred year period of peaceful, voluntary, democratic decline into unAmerican socialism, statism and far left ideologies. In the twenty first century, America has collapsed by popular vote and Joe Biden has been the national voice and cheerleader of this collapse. This Joe Biden and this America, rejecting the Age of Enlightenment in which America was founded, rejecting America's traditional role as the world's defender of the Enlightenment, has surrendered to the forces of faith and fear, and committed the crime of the century. In an illustration of the failures of democracy during the West's terminal stage of decline, an illustration as extraordinary as it is deplorable, America has committed suicide assisted by Doctor Death Joe Biden. Look at Biden's term of office and see national weakness and submission enacted by executive order. See him tell Israel not to retaliate against Hamas terror attacks launched against Israel on October 7, 2023. See him lift sanctions on Iran, allow Iran to fund its global terror machine with billions of dollars in oil revenue, pay Iran billions of dollars in ransom payments for hostages, and seek to resurrect the Iran deal which allowed Iran to develop nuclear missiles. See him tell Israel not to retaliate against Iran's acts of aggression. See him allow Vladmir Putin to invade Ukraine by stating publicly that America would regard any such invasion as a minor incursion and would not respond. See him surrender Afghanistan, destroy America's dignity and standing in the world, leave behind billions of dollars of state of the art military equipment to the enemy, and consign the Afghan people to suffer in the jaws of a psychopathic theocracy. See him destroy America's military and mandate affirmative action policies which give preferential treatment to women and nonwhites, and condemn policies of nondiscrimination and merit selection as lashes of white rage and white privilege. See him destroy America's military by mandating covid vaccines without scientific justification. See him allow China to threaten Taiwan's freedom and independence. See him allow China to launch cyber attacks against America. See him allow China to enter American airspace and engage in espionage with balloons. See him dissolve America's borders and allows ten million illegal alien to settle across the nation, including terrorists, gang members, criminal networks, Chinese infiltrators and miscellaneous scum from Latin America. See him sell the nation, its farmland, heartland, military technology and defense infrastructure, to a fire breathing reptile rampaging across Asia: "Departing President Joe Biden offered a farewell brag this week to his State Department about how his tenure had improved America's stature abroad. In his now accustomed weird mix of whispering and fiery shouting, Biden apparently felt he had to lie or mislead about almost every one of his 'achievements.' Yet to the extent that anything improved abroad on his watch—the weakening of Iran or the near destruction of Hamas and Hezbollah—it was due despite, not because of, Biden. Biden, bowing to election year political pressure, did all he could to restrain and block Israeli retaliations to the October 7 massacres. Only after he was repeatedly proven wrong does he now shamelessly take credit for what Israel ironically achieved by ignoring his own threats directed at Israel. Biden is correct only that Iran is 'weaker than it's been in decades.' But Tehran was aided, not hurt, by Biden's nonstop efforts to lift sanctions, to allow Iran to make billions in oil revenues, to pay the theocracy billions of dollars in hostage ransom, and to beg the mullahs to reenter the ill starred Iran deal. Everything Biden did makes it much harder for Israel to survive. So, Iran is now weakened only because Israel ignored Biden's nonstop ankle biting and finger shaking not to retaliate to Iranian aggression. Instead, the Netanyahu government systematically destroyed Iranian air defenses after killing most of Iran's foreign terrorist operatives. Biden referenced the end of the Assad regime in Syria, but it imploded not due to any effort by Biden. It was overwhelmed instead only after the Israeli decimation of Hezbollah and humiliation of Iran—coupled with the election victory of Donald Trump—that encouraged Assad's enemies to attack a now isolated and weakened regime. Biden is also taking credit for rumors that Hamas might release its hostages, who have been held in a subterranean labyrinth since October 7. But why, with less than a week left in his tenure, did Biden believe Hamas might begin releasing the hostages when even his own Secretary of State, Antony Blinken, has criticized the administration for spending 16 months pressuring Israel, which only emboldened Hamas's stonewalling? Much more likely, the election of Donald Trump and his threat to unleash terrible retribution on Hamas (and implicitly on Iran) had prompted the terrorists' tardy willingness to negotiate a release. Of the horrific scramble from Afghanistan—the greatest humiliation of the US military in a half century that cost the lives of 13 Marines—Biden boasted: '[I am] the first president in decades who's not leaving a war in Afghanistan to his successor.' Think of his warped logic: Biden does not leave a war to his successor only because he fled in humiliation and lost it. Biden also took credit for saving Ukraine from Russia. But he conveniently omitted why Russia invaded in the first place. Had Biden not destroyed American deterrence by fleeing Kabul and leaving behind billions of dollars in abandoned US military equipment, had he not claimed, prior to the Russian invasion, that his reaction to Putin's likely aggression would hinge on whether it was 'a minor incursion,' then the Russians might never have invaded at all. Vladimir Putin grabbed Crimea and the Donbas in 2014 during the Obama-Biden administration. He later sought to swallow the entire country with an attack on Kyiv in 2022 on Biden's watch. However, Putin stayed within his borders only during one of the last four administrations—Donald Trump's. Biden crowed that he accomplished all these misadventures without the use of force—'We have not gone to war to make these things happen.' But Biden did more than any other recent president to weaken the US military. Under his tenure, the Pentagon suffered a real reduction in its budget. And it never quite recovered from the Afghanistan debacle. Annually, the military now comes up 40,000 recruits short due to Biden's draconian vaccination requirements, its new woke mandates, and its constant false accusations of 'white rage' and 'white privilege' in the ranks—libels that prompted a Pentagon internal investigation that found no such racism. China was never more bellicose than during Biden's presidency. It serially threatened Taiwan, used cyber warfare to bully the US, brazenly expropriated US military technology, and without worry sent a spy balloon to traverse the US with impunity. Biden's open border saw more than 10 million illegal entries, among them thousands of Chinese nationals. Meanwhile, Chinese investors were freed to systematically buy up thousands of acres of America's farmland adjacent to sensitive US military bases and installations. Add it all up, and Biden would have done better to have just kept quiet and departed his failed presidency in shame." (Joe Biden's Bizarro World Of Foreign Policy 'Achievements' by Victor Davis Hanson). See Joe Biden appease the forces of Islamic jihad, the voices proclaiming God Is Great, Death to America, Death to Israel, a Curse on the Jews, Victory to Islam, and open the gates of Western civilization to a nightmare of terror swirling in from Eastern sands: "President Joe Biden is delisting the Houthi rebels of Yemen as a terrorist organization, despite the fact that the group attacks civilians, considers the US an enemy, and is armed and funded by Iran. As Breitbart News has previously reported 'The Houthis are a jihadist organization whose slogan is 'God Is Great, Death to America, Death to Israel, a Curse on the Jews, Victory to Islam.' " (Biden To Delist Houthi Rebels As Terrorists; Cotton: 'Appeasing Iran' by Joel Pollak). A certain man at arms, a man of some education, attempted to kill King Henry III. He was dragged asunder, then beheaded, and his body divided into three parts; each part was then dragged through one of the principal cities of England, and was afterwards hung on a gibbet used for robbers. (Matthew Paris's English History: From The Year 1235 To 1273 by J. A. Giles, quoting Paris). Execution by hanging, drawing, beheading and quartering. This was the punishment for treason in the Kingdom of England in the thirteenth century. It was deemed a just punishment and a warning to the people of the fate of traitors. Valuing their freedom above all other things, the people of England demanded this punishment for traitors who sought to take their freedom away from them. Eight centuries after the people of England visited horrible death upon the enemies in their midst stabbing them in the back, the people of America have rewarded their own traitors. In the twilight procession of Western civilization in the twenty first century, America has allowed treason to occupy the highest office in the land.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION: NIGHTMARE WITHOUT END

Bristlecone pines are the oldest living organisms on earth. Having a lifespan of 5000 years, they thrive on adversity. They are able to live at high elevations at which other life forms cannot survive. They can live in the coldest temperatures, the driest soils, the fiercest winds and the shortest growing seasons. They can resist invasions by pests. Able to fight the elements for thousands of years, they are classified by scientists as extremeophiles. Bristlecone pines have a counterpart in the world of politics and public affairs. These political bristlecone pines have withstood all manner of attacks, criticisms, condemnations and challenges. They cannot be swept away because they are fixed and implanted in the soil of the society's ethos. They cannot be uprooted because they are an intrinsic growth of the cultural landscape. They are nourished by the establishment and large sections of the electorate. Court rulings do not derail them nor do ostensible changes in rules nor do the censures of right minded commentators. They will remain in existence as long as the West remains and will collapse when the West militarily collapses and is no more. A product of moral and cultural degeneration, they will go down along with the West, and will appear on the epitaph of the culture. These political bristlecone pines are affirmative action policies, and like the far left majorities which enacted them, they are here to stay. They will no more fold up and disappear than the majority will change the race and gender religion which reflects its own psychological propensities. In the face of all attempts to ban them, affirmative action policies are today as strong as ever before and reveal their resiliency in every sector of society. Universities today still require students, as part of their admissions applications, to write essays in support of policies which justify racism and sexism in the name of diversity, inclusion, and the highest form of fairness and equity. They require students to write essays in support of inclusion on the basis of race and sex, and diversity on the basis of race and sex. They require students to renounce their right of free speech, expression and conscience and to support the diversity, equity and inclusion party line. They require students to support far left political positions. They require students to state a time when they contributed to the abolition of race blind, sex blind, nondiscriminatory selection procedures, and contributed to making offices welcoming, diverse and inclusive on the basis of race and sex. They require students to pledge their support for policies which discriminate against white males. They require students to support a campus culture of Marxist identity politics. They require students to subordinate the values of talent and ability to the achievement of race and gender diversity. They require students to reject intellectual freedom in favor of ideological lockstep. They require students to reject campus free speech in favor of a campus monoculture raising the single crop of Marxism. They require students to reject institutional neutrality in favor of indoctrination of students and staff, and the enforcement of race and gender politics. They require students to reject the free and open exchange of ideas and opinions. They require students to be communist leaning, black power leaning, radical feminist leaning, tribalist leaning, and to intimidate and exclude all those who defend liberal individualist order: "The Massachusetts Institute of Technology still requires a diversity, equity and inclusion essay for some students despite banning DEI faculty statements last spring. The requirement by MIT's Sloan School of Management has drawn criticism from scholars, students, and alumni, with some accusing the school of being hypocritical for failing to eliminate all DEI mandates. Eric Rasmusen, a board director of the MIT Free Speech Alliance, said he is disappointed that the DEI essay is still part of graduate students' application. 'What the Sloan inquiry about an applicant's political views shows is that it isn't enough for a college president to say DEI statements won't be required: the message has to get down to the hundreds of low level bureaucrats who actually run the university,' Rasmusen said in an email interview with The College Fix. 'The Sloan School, where I myself TA'd as a PhD student, is literally at the far end of MIT geographically,' Rasmussen said. 'Apparently the message hasn't gotten down to Professor [Catherine] Tucker, the Executive MBA Faculty Director. I hope she will make the change shortly.' The Fix reached out to Tucker and MIT's media relations office for comment twice in the past two weeks, asking about ending the DEI essay, but did not receive a response. Currently, the Sloan School of Management requires Executive MBA applicants to write a 200 word 'Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion' essay about 'a time when you contributed toward making a work environment or organization more welcoming, inclusive, and diverse,' according to the application website. The essay requirement remains in spite of MIT President Sally Kornbluth's decision to eliminate DEI pledges from faculty applications since they 'impinge on freedom of expression,' The College Fix reported in May. Timothy Minella, a fellow at the Goldwater Institute, a conservative thinktank in Arizona, first drew attention to the application requirement in a recent post on X. Spencer Sindhusen, president of MIT Students for Open Inquiry, said he was surprised to learn MIT demands prospective graduate students adhere to DEI. The sophomore majoring in management and political science told The Fix the requirement doesn't make sense after MIT 'abolished' the DEI faculty pledge last May 'because of its encroachment on the freedom of expression.' 'I assume expectations differ for students–ie MIT might still believe a diverse class composition is worthwhile for certain social ends, whereas talent matters more for faculty because it impacts the quality of teaching and research,' Sindhusen said. 'The dissonance vis-a-vis free expression puzzles me, though.' He also said the elite Massachusetts institute still has work to do to end censorship and preserve free discourse. 'MIT leadership should continue to work in good faith with the MFSA and any relevant groups to support the freedom of expression,' Sindhusen said in an email. 'Administration also should support—or not interfere with—student affairs that appropriately advance the cause. As the leader of a free speech organization on campus, I appreciate that they're doing well in that regard.' He said MIT also must reform its student admissions process because there is a systemic 'campus culture issue.' 'We shouldn't focus on diversity for diversity's sake. We need to focus more on talent and the diversity thereof, which would likely translate into intellectual or ideological diversity as well,' Sindhusen said. Peter Bonilla, executive director of the MIT Free Speech Alliance, told The Fix he would like to see administrators examine where 'DEI goals may in practice clash with free expression and freedom of conscience.' Although Bonilla said he admired Kornbluth's decision to get rid of DEI faculty statements, he is concerned about other DEI conflicts still lurking around the university. Bonilla said he thinks MIT needs to shift gears in its approach to protecting campus free speech. 'MFSA has issued a comprehensive set of recommendations for how MIT can improve its overall climate for free expression,' Bonilla told The Fix in a recent email. 'These include adopting a position of institutional neutrality as several of its peers have done recently, as well as educating staff on the importance of free expression and viewpoint diversity.' [Spencer Sindhusen] said MIT's Civil Discourse Project has helped to support free speech on campus. The project enables faculty and staff to openly debate 'controversial issues of the day' as well as hear from a variety of speakers, according to the MIT Concourse website. 'But more viewpoint variety among students can be valuable, too, especially when it comes to offering communities of support no matter what side of the aisle they might fall,' Sindhusen said. 'I understand this can be mechanistically challenging, but more efforts should be made to achieve it.' The student leader said he is concerned about speaking freely on campus due to the campus favoring of leftist political views. 'Like most elite colleges, MIT has a vastly left leaning student body. What I and a few others have faced is getting browbeaten or ostracized for speaking our minds or hosting events, which discourages honest expressions or exchanges of ideas,' he told The Fix." (MIT Still Requires DEI Essay Of Grad Students After Abandoning Faculty Pledge by Maria Davis). Today's establishment proclaims that racism and sexism are the highest forms of fairness and equity, and there can never be too much racism or sexism because there can never be too much fairness or equity. There can be too little fairness or equity but there can never be too much. It proclaims that diversity on the basis of race and sex and inclusion on the basis of race and sex, and the exclusion of white males from society, are the highest forms of fairness and equity, and these policies can never go too far. It proclaims that a progressive society is on every level of government, local, state and federal, and in every sector of activity, corporate, cultural and academic, by intention and by design, a diverse, inclusive and equitable society, that is to say, a racist, sexist and tribalist society, which has rejected the Enlightenment and turned back the clock to the year zero: "On Thursday's broadcast of CNN This Morning, Birmingham Mayor Randall Woodfin stated that there aren't any areas where DEI has gone too far and 'there's no such thing as going too far when we talk about equity and inclusion.' Host Kasie Hunt asked, 'Sir, do you think there are any areas where DEI programs have gone too far?' Woodfin answered, 'I do not believe that's the case. Look, we've made the word diversity, we've made the word equity, we—as in others—have made those words, inclusion, backwards. Inclusion is not a bad thing. There is no such thing as going too far as it relates to being inclusive. There's no such thing as going too far as it relates to equity. This is America. Equity is the right thing to do. There's no such thing as diversity being bad.' " (Birmingham Mayor: DEI Hasn't Gone Too Far, 'No Such Thing As Going Too Far' on Equity by Ian Hanchett). In the Mediterranean Sea lives a jellyfish with an extraordinary ability. Called the immortal jellyfish, it is able to rewind its life cycle, reprogram its cells and return to youth. It is able reverse the aging process and change from an adult back into a baby. It can do this an indefinite number of times. In the twenty first century, affirmative action policies are monsters which cannot die. Their DNA has been programmed by the mob to withstand repeal and rescission. They are the eternal shame of the West as it speeds into the abyss.

RIGHT WING PHILOSOPHIES TRUE AND FALSE

A counterfeit is a fake replica of a genuine product. The intent of counterfeiting is to create an imitation in order to deceive others into believing it is genuine. Counterfeit products, counterfeit food, drinks, medicines, footwear, clothing, accessories and personal care products, often contain harmful components and can be life threatening. In the realm of political philosophy, a series of counterfeits has been in circulation for centuries and deceived millions of people into believing it contained authentic items. These counterfeits are lethal and have harmed individuals and societies the world over. Nations which have enacted them have destroyed themselves and endangered human rights. Uncritical eyes have seen superficial resemblances to the originals and have suffered the consequences by setting up tyrannies. Citizens voting for them have experienced buyer's remorse. These counterfeits are known as right wing philosophies but beyond surface appearances, they are diametrically opposed to genuine right wing products. Genuine right wing philosophy is opposed to government power used to protect society or the church. It is opposed to left wing philosophy which promotes the use of government power to control life and property for the sake of society. There are three forms of genuine right wing philosophy: Classical right wing philosophy, libertarian right wing philosophy and anarchist right wing philosophy. But only the first philosophy is rationally justifiable. Classical Right Wing Philosophy. Classical right wing philosophy, which marked the politics of ancient Greece and Rome, is based on the scientific definition of man as a rational animal. Differentiated from other animals, man is a being who survives and flourishes by the use of abstract thought and intelligence. Being a rational animal does not not mean that man always or necessarily makes rational choices, but that man has the power and ability to make rational choices. Because man is a rational animal, his unique good and perfection resides in a life of rationally justified actions. The ground of human freedom is its use to realize man's definition. Individuals who fail to live up to this definition and who lead lives marked by irrational activities, such as promoting dogmas of various kinds, from Marxism to Islam to Christianity, are not morally or legally entitled to possess freedom. Individuals who have chosen not to rationally flourish are not entitled to have their freedom protected by the government. Classical right wing philosophy limits government power to the protection of the freedom of rational flourishers. Listen to Aristotle proclaim that the good of anything resides in its function. The function of man, differentiated from other animals, is the use of reason. The good of man resides in the best and most excellent use of reason. Individuals who do not lead lives of rational excellence, who do not utilize their rational talents and abilities to the highest degree of which they are capable, are not morally speaking human beings and are not entitled to possess freedom: "The goodness or efficiency of a flute player or sculptor or craftsman of any sort, and in general of anybody who has some function or business to perform, is thought to reside in that function; and similarly it may be held that the good of man resides in the function of man. Are we then to suppose that, while the carpenter and the shoemaker have definite functions or businesses belonging to them, man as such has none, and is not designed by nature to fulfil any function? Must we not rather assume that, just as the eye, the hand, the foot and each of the various members of the body manifestly has a certain function of its own, so a human being also has a certain function over and above all the functions of his particular members? What then precisely can this function be? The mere act of living appears to be shared even by plants, whereas we are looking for the function peculiar to man; we must therefore set aside the vital activity of nutrition and growth. Next in the scale will come some form of sentient life; but this too appears to be shared by horses, oxen, and animals generally. There remains therefore what may be called the practical life of the rational part of man. If we declare that the function of man is a certain form of life and define that form of life as the exercise of the soul's faculties in accordance with reason, and say that the function of a good man is to perform these activities well and rightly, it follows that the good of man is the active exercise of his soul's faculties in conformity with rational excellence or virtue." (Nicomachean Ethics by Aristotle, Book I, Chapter 7). Libertarian Right Wing Philosophy. Libertarian right wing philosophy grounds individual freedom in the doctrine of moral subjectivism. It proclaims that moral values are subjective, that man has no scientific definition and therefore no objective function or good, and that therefore the government must protect the freedom of all individuals to do as they please, and to live nonflourishing lives in any manner they choose, on the sole condition that they do not initiate the use of force or fraud against others. It proclaims that the individual has a right to live a life marked by moral mismanagement, moral error, moral offense, moral decay and moral putrefaction, and still be treated with dignity before the law, on the sole condition that he does no harm to others: "The distinction between the loss of consideration which a person may rightly incur by defect of prudence or of personal dignity, and the reprobation which is due to him for an offense against the rights of others, is not a merely nominal distinction. It makes a vast difference both in our feelings and in our conduct towards him whether he displeases us in things in which we think we have a right to control him, or in things in which we know that we have not. If he displeases us, we may express our distaste, and we may stand aloof from a person as well as from a thing that displeases us; but we shall not therefore feel called on to make his life uncomfortable. We shall reflect that he already bears, or will bear, the whole penalty of his error; if he spoils his life by mismanagement, we shall not, for that reason, desire to spoil it still further: instead of wishing to punish him, we shall rather endeavor to alleviate his punishment, by showing him how he may avoid or cure the evils his conduct tends to bring upon him." (On Liberty by John Stuart Mill, Chapter 4). Forming the basis of libertarian philosophy, moral subjectivism is self canceling. It proclaims that all moral values are subjective, yet advocates a policy of tolerance toward all nonaggressive individuals as a universal moral absolute. To be consistent, it has to proclaim its own policy of tolerance to be as subjective and nonbinding as all other policies. Anarchist Right Wing Philosophy. Anarchist right wing philosophy suffers the same fate as its subjectivist libertarian brother: self cancellation if followed through consistently. Denying that man possesses a scientific definition and thus an objective function or good, anarchism condemns all acts of coercion, aggression, expropriation and depredation directed at nonflourishing, human appearing animals. It proclaims its principle of nonaggression to be a universal, holy absolute consecrated in the church of the antistate: "I define anarchist society as one where there is no legal possibility for coercive aggression against the person or property of any individual. Anarchists oppose the State because it has its very being in such aggression, namely, the expropriation of private property through taxation, the coercive exclusion of other providers of defense service from its territory, and all of the other depredations and coercions that are built upon these twin foci of invasions of individual rights." (Society Without A State by Murray Rothbard). Counterfeit Right Wing Philosophies. In contrast to classical, libertarian and anarchist philosophies, counterfeit right wing philosophies qualify, condition and circumscribe individual freedom by collectivist or otherwise irrational ideas. The Christian right subordinates individual freedom to theological dogmas. The conservative right subordinates individual freedom to family or tradition. The populist right subordinates individual freedom to race, ethnicity or the nation. Denying the individual freedom is an absolute, as claimed by libertarianism and anarchism, and denying that it can be qualified, conditioned ot circumscribed by the scientific definition of man, as claimed by Classical right wing philosophy, conservatism and populism are forms of collectivism, while the Christian right is a form of supernaturalism. Listen to the Christian right proclaim there is no constitutional separation between church and state. Listen to it proclaim that the United States Constitution does not forbid the government from establishing religion, and from declaring that a one cell human zygote formed at the moment of conception is an actual human person, an unborn human being, by virtue of the infusion of a supernatural soul, and that abortion is thus always an act of murder. Listen to it proclaim that the right to liberty does not mean the right to liberty, A does not mean A, and does not forbid the government from declaring that a potential human life, a life which does not exist, is subject to protection by the government: "The Nation's historical understanding of ordered liberty does not prevent the people's elected representatives from deciding how abortion should be regulated. What sharply distinguishes the abortion right from the rights recognized in the cases on which Roe and Casey rely is something that both those decisions acknowledged: Abortion is different because it destroys what Roe termed 'potential life' and what the law challenged in this case calls an 'unborn human being.' " (Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health Organization, United States Supreme Court, June 24, 2022). The history of Western political philosophy presents a spectrum of views on freedom which excludes a single view conspicuous by its absence. This view is absent because it belongs to another culture and has no place in the West, and yet is an imperative of common sense. It belongs to Classical culture where it was born in the noonday world of Apollo, preeminent Classical god, symbol of reason and intelligence, and bringer of the sun every morning. Rejecting the notion of freedom as license, and freedom as limited by God, nation, family or tradition, the Classical right wing philosophy of freedom as limited by the scientific definition of man is the only path to the salvation of civilization.

MARXISTS DECLARE WAR ON JEWS

Skeletal people with shaven heads and hollow eyes. Emaciated faces twisted in screams. Dead bodies decompose, blacken the air and fill it with stench. People poisoned in gas chambers and burned in crematoria. Hair, shoes, gold teeth and reading glasses of murdered men, women and children labeled in warehouses. These are scenes from the Holocaust, the campaign conducted by national socialist Germany during World War II to exterminate Jews. Eighty years after Allied forces liberated Hitler's death mills, the armies of antisemitism and mass murder are back in business, engulfing the West in disgrace. Today's exterminationists wear different colors and flags but march to the same song. The song is anticapitalism, antiliberalism and antiWesternism, which form the basis of their antisemitism, and it was sung by national socialists during the Third Reich, and it is sung today by Marxists the world over. Marxists today have picked up where the national socialists left off and are determined to finish the campaign launched by Hitler. They have helpers, the same helpers the Germans had, and these helpers, as in yesteryear, are spreading death and destruction in the Middle East, and in addition, they are assaulting Jews throughout the West. The helpers of the Marxists are Muslims, and a Muslim-Marxist axis has become the terrifying successor of the national socialist-Muslim axis, and has raised the curtain on a second Holocaust. From 1941 to 1945, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Al-Husseini, lived in Berlin and was an honored guest of Germany. He collaborated with Germany in forming the Muslim SS Handzar Division in Bosnia to exterminate Jews. He condemned with Hitler the "Jewish world conspiracy" and sought to eradicate it. He was the grateful recipient of a letter written by Hitler on November 28, 1941, in which the German leader condemns Jews as capitalist idlers and parasites, and pledges to work with Muslims in a global campaign to exterminate them: "Germany stands for an uncompromising struggle against Jews. It is self evident that the struggle against the Jewish national homeland in Palestine forms part of this struggle, since such a national homeland would be nothing other than a political base for the destructive influence of Jewish interests. Germany also knows that the claim that Jewry plays the role of an economic pioneer in Palestine is a lie. Only the Arabs work there, not the Jews. Germany is determined to call on the European nations one by one to solve the Jewish problem and, at the proper moment, to address the same appeal to nonEuropean peoples." In the twenty first century, Muslims live in the house of Marxists as their honored guests and work with Marxists to continue the global campaign commenced by Germany. The Marxist-Muslim axis, replacing the national socialist-Muslim axis, has issued a manifesto of jihad and Jew hatred which has sent the chill of fear through Holocaust survivors and ordinary people who see civilization in a state of free fall. Disseminated in homes, offices and university campuses throughout the West, the manifesto proclaims that a progressive society is a proPalestine, antiIsrael terror organization. A progressive society is backed by Iran and seeks to massacre Jews. A progressive society is a resistance movement against capitalism and Israel. A progressive society is an Intifada against liberal order and its zionist expression. A progressive society advocates war crimes against Israelis. A progressive society is a keffiyeh clad army marching against freedom and modernity. A progressive society advocates the killing, rape, burning and decapitation of Israelis in the name of Palestinian liberation. A progressive society advocates the destruction of Israel in the name of the greatness of Allah. A progressive society is a round the clock antiIsrael demonstration in which the demonstrators brandish weapons against Jews. A progressive society is a mass meeting of Marxists and Muslims demanding that Jews be taken hostage and that Israel's Jews be killed from the river to the sea. A progressive society is run by Marxist presidents, professors and administrators demanding that Jews beg for their lives before they are killed in cold blood. A progressive society is a Palestinian student organization seeking to cleanse Israel of capitalism and Jews, and proclaiming that Muslim tyranny will never die. A progressive society launches Hamas paragliders to invade Israel from the air and kill its inhabitants. A progressive society trains masked hoodlums to kill Jews in the name of Free Palestine. A progressive society commits genocide against Jews in the name of achieving justice in Palestine. A progressive society holds vigils in support of Muslim terrorists in Palestine, Gaza and the West Bank who died in their campaign to slaughter Jews. A progressive society advocates terror attacks against Israel, occupations of Israel, and a jihad, a holy war, a global crusade, against Israel and Western liberal civilization: "The Iranian backed Palestinian terror group Hamas' massacre of Jews in Israel last weekend appears to have galvanized students across the United States into putting on proPalestine, antiIsrael demonstrations on their college campuses. One student at Ohio State University even referred to the slaughtering of Jews by Hamas as 'a resistance movement.' At UCLA, students were heard chanting, 'Intifada,' an Arabic word that translates to 'shaking off' and in the Palestinian context, is understood to mean a civil uprising. 'These are basic human rights that the zionists have violated, and which they shouldn't even be controlling in the first place!' one protest leader—clad in a keffiyeh that covered his entire face—shouted at Brooklyn College. The man then accused Israel of 'getting away with unspeakable war crimes' just after the Jewish country suffered a massive terrorist attack by Hamas, which resulted in a mass murder of over 1,000 Israelis, as well as rape, burned bodies, reported decapitated babies, and hostages. 'As we speak, they are getting away with such unspeakable war crimes on the Palestinian people!' the man shouted. He then called on everyone present to stand with 'our Palestinian resistance,' adding, 'No matter who stands in our way—if Allah the almighty is with us, it does not matter who is against us!' which elicited cheers and chants of Allahu akbar! Additional video footage in the same video clip showcases crowds of apparent students chanting, 'Israel has got to go, hey hey, ho ho!' and, 'We will free Palestine, within our lifetime!' as well as, 'Israel, go to hell!' Similar footage from the University of Washington shows a large crowd of students chanting, 'Palestine is our demand! No peace on stolen land!' and, 'There is only one solution! Intifada Revolution!' Students were also heard chanting, 'Resistance is justified! Our people are occupied!' In another video from the University of Washington, a tearful Jewish student can be heard pleading with a man who appeared to be a school administrator, begging him not to let the proterror demonstrations continue on campus. 'They want our people dead, they want us killed,' the student cried. 'How is it allowed? How are you allowing this?' 'They want us dead. Please end it, please,' the student begged while the antiIsrael demonstration raged on. A purported flyer for the antiIsrael demonstration at the University of Washington even featured an image of a Hamas paraglider. Meanwhile, at Columbia University—where an Israeli student was attacked by a woman with a weapon on Wednesday—students could be heard chanting, 'From the river to the sea, Palestine will be free!' And in Columbus, Ohio, students at Ohio State University, led by the school's Students for Justice in Palestine student organization, chanted, 'Palestine will never die!' Meanwhile, Students for Justice in Palestine copresident Heba Latif called the Hamas terrorist attack against Israel 'a resistance movement against the occupation.' Students at Arizona State University were also seen marching and heard chanting, 'Free Palestine!' in the wake of the mass murder of Jews in Israel. The antiIsrael protests do not appear to be ending anytime soon as the student organization Students for Justice in Palestine is planning on holding similar demonstrations on Friday at Princeton University where 'attendees are required to wear face masks at all events.' A community vigil will also be held for those who have died in the territory of Palestine, Gaza and the West Bank—but there does not appear to be a vigil planned for the Israelis who were slaughtered en masse by Palestinian terrorists. Additionally, Hamas has called on Muslims worldwide to stage a Day of Jihad, or holy war, on Friday." (Hamas Massacre Sparks ProPalestine, AntiIsrael Demonstrations On US College Campuses: 'Israel, Go to Hell!' by Alana Mastrangelo). Today's Marxist-Muslim axis proclaims that a progressive society is an anticapitalist, antiliberal society loyal to the cause of Palestine, Hamas and terror. A progressive society seeks to give Muslim terrorists a monopoly on the use of force. A progressive society enthusiastically praises acts of terror against Israel. A progressive society is a cult of genocide ruled by an ideology of civilizational hatred. A progressive society exalts violence against Jews as the vital oxygen of Palestinian freedom fighters. A progressive society is animated by the acts of destruction against liberal, secular nations. A progressive society is excited and happy when the blood of Jews flows down streets, when zionism has been eradicated from the face of the earth, and when Western freedom and capitalism lay in ruins: "A paid social media ad campaign launched this week by the David Horowitz Freedom Center is targeting proterror Hamas Loyalist professors at ten prestigious American universities who choose to promote the ideology of the genocidal terrorist cult, often in direct violation of university policy. Cornell Professor Russell Rickford spoke at a proHamas rally to extoll the virtues of the terrorist group. 'Hamas has challenged the monopoly of violence,' Rickford said, adding that the Palestinians 'were able to breathe for the first time in years' thanks to the bloody October 7th massacre. '[I]t was exhilarating! It was exhilarating! It was energizing! And if they [Palestinians] weren't exhilarated by this challenge to the monopoly of violence, by this shifting of the balance of power, then they would not be human. I was exhilarated!' Rickford concluded, expressing sheer joy at the extent of Hamas's slaughter." (Freedom Center Targets Proterror Professors On Social Media by Sara Dogan). Eighty years after the end of Hitler's Holocaust, a Marxist inspired movement of postmodernism or postEnlightenment has paved the way for a reprise. Rejecting individual rights, human universality and human essentialism, Marxist inspired postEnlightenment thinkers promote the politics of gender, race, class, ethnicity and culture. Individuals outside a protected gender, race, class, ethnicity or culture are condemned as the Other. They are condemned as outsiders, the unwelcome and the unwanted. Today's Marxists have condemned Jews as the Other and launched a second Holocaust.

MARXIST COMMANDANTS GAS MEDICINE

He is the most widely recognized perpetrator of crimes against humanity during the Third Reich. His sadistic medical experiments at Auschwitz and selection of victims to be murdered in the gas chambers earned him the nickname Angel Of Death. His infamous deeds illustrate with stark brutality the danger posed when science ceases to be science, when science rejects the values of the Enlightenment, and is taken over by ideology. His name is Josef Mengele, and he is the symbol of medicine gone awry in the service of insane criminality. In the twenty first century, Dr Mengele has returned to life wearing new colors and marching under a new flag. He has returned to life as a doctor in the service national socialism's founding religion. He has returned to life as an embodiment of the politicization of medicine perpetrated by the number one religion of our time, spreading outward from the same basements, cellars and sewers as national socialism. He has returned to life as the face of Marxism and its invasion of medicine. The twenty first century Marxist Josef Mengele, like the twentieth century national socialist Josef Mengele, has declared war on sound judgment and issued a manifesto of antiEnlightenment which seeks to halt the progress of science and turn back the clock to the year zero. Listen to the manifesto of today's Hitlerites and hear the wholesale rejection of scientific norms, hear the hijacking of the noble healing arts and healing gods, championed by Hippocrates, the father of medicine, and hear them placed in the service of doing harm. Taken by doctors when they commence their profession, the Hippocratic Oath states, I swear by Apollo, Healer, by Asclepius, by Hygieia, by Panacea, and by all the gods and goddesses, making them my witnesses, that I will carry out, according to my ability and judgment, this oath and this indenture. Into whatsoever houses I enter, I will enter to help the sick, and I will abstain from all intentional wrong doing and harm, especially from abusing the bodies of man or woman, slave or free. Now listen to the manifesto of the Marxist Mengeles in the twenty first century and hear an oath taken to destroy science and humanity. The manifesto proclaims that a progressive medical school demands that students support the Marxist ideological and geopolitical party line. A progressive medical school demands that students support Palestinian terror and the destruction of Israel. A progressive medical school is a sanctuary for far left agitators and rabble rousers. A progressive medical school rejects empiricism, objectivity, merit and excellence, and promotes race and gender preferences, politics and philosophies. A progressive medical school is a political institution and not an academic institution. A progressive medical school does not transmit facts or knowledge but dogmas of black power, radical feminism and Palestinian liberation. A progressive medical school rejects the objective analysis and evaluation of ideas in favor of blind ideological lockstep. A progressive medical school rejects a science based curriculum in favor of ideological agendas. A progressive medical school rejects free, independent, nonreligious thought in favor of partisan, political pressure placed on students. A progressive medical school is a Marxist political movement in which professors abuse their authority and seek to program students in adherence to political correctness. A progressive medical school has replaced the system of higher education with a system of higher political indoctrination. A progressive medical school confines its subjects of study to political and ideological content. A progressive medical school rejects the professional, unbiased direction of medical students in favor of the mass production of Manchurian candidates. A progressive medical school is a political and religious institution whose students worship at the altars of gender, race and class. A progressive medical school rejects academic thoroughness in favor of instilling Marxist doctrines and pseudoinformation. A progressive medical school rejects academic standards, authorities, competence and community and is a pulpit and congregation for the propagation of the faith. A progressive medical school rejects quality education in favor of inflaming emotions of hatred and discontent toward the capitalist system and encouraging students to march aggressively against Western civilization: "Recently, the end of year medical exam at Sorbonne Paris Nord University was the subject of a lively controversy. Some of the questions asked of students included ideological and geopolitical references that had no connection with medical training, such as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Although the management has acknowledged 'blunders,' it has not taken the full measure of this worrying political infiltration into the academic sanctuary that the university should be. The inclusion of such issues in a medical exam goes beyond the limits of what is acceptable. It reveals a profound subversion of the educational objectives that should promote scientific objectivity, merit, and excellence, the pillars of medical progress. Higher education is intended to transmit factual knowledge and encourage critical thinking without any ideological considerations. Instead, we are witnessing a regrettable interference of politics and ideological agendas in education, threatening the very foundations of our knowledge society. The university must remain a space for free thought, production and transmission of knowledge, free from partisan pressures. Tolerating such actions is tantamount to opening Pandora's box and jeopardizing the independence of higher education from ideologies. If such abuses become commonplace and widespread, what future is there for our higher education system? Should we tolerate politicized movements with partisan aims dictating the content of university programs to the detriment of the impartial training of future doctors, engineers, lawyers, etc? In the long term, this could seriously compromise the quality of the training provided and the competence of graduates. It is, therefore, crucial that the academic community as a whole mobilizes to strongly reaffirm the fundamental principles of integrity, neutrality, independence, and secularism that must prevail in higher education institutions. We must refuse to give in to external pressures from whatever quarter, whether political, religious, or otherwise, that could corrupt our age old educational standards, protected by academic freedom. Beyond simple academic rigor, it is a major societal responsibility that falls to academic authorities. They must guarantee the highest quality education for future generations, free from any form of ideological indoctrination or propaganda. The future of our country, the competence of our elites, the quality of public and private services depend on it. We therefore ask the President of the Sorbonne Paris-Nord University what measures he intends to take to sanction these abuses and ensure that they do not happen again." (A Worrying Politicization Of Medical Education by Samuel Mayol). Today's Marxists proclaim that a progressive medical school teaches students to accept the primacy of social justice over individual justice and to do so as a matter of faith, without critical thought of any kind. A progressive medical school holds mandatory sessions on the vital importance of radical political thinking. A progressive medical school teaches students that modern industrial and technological civilization is the source of catastrophic climate change and must be dismantled. A progressive medical school teaches students the tenets of transgender ideology which deny the biological reality of human gender and declare that gender can be changed by human belief or action. A progressive medical school teaches students the primacy of the state and society over individual rights, private businesses and free institutions. A progressive medical school teaches students that white people are the essence of evil and people of color are the essence of goodness. A progressive medical school teaches students that women, nonwhites and the poor comprise a master class, while wealthy, white males comprise an oppressive, parasitic, exploitative subhuman class which must be eradicated. A progressive medical school teaches that true vitality is revealed in the struggle to overthrow the white male capitalist system and establish a dictatorship of black, brown, feminist, proletarian power in its place: "A leading Louisiana based medical center forced its medical students and resident physicians to play a radical game as part of training geared at indoctrinating future physicians to advocate for left wing progressive social justice ideals, according to a shocking revelation by a whistleblower. The Do No Harm medical watchdog association recently received a tip about an alarming mandatory didactic session that took place at Baton Rouge General last month. The medical center is a member of the Mayo Clinic Care Network and is affiliated with several medical school programs. During the three hour session, participants were required to play The Last Straw—a game focused on promoting progressive views such as 'man made climate change,' gender ideology, prostate and antibusiness positions, and social justice, according to the anonymous tipster. The game begins with 'character creation,' whereby a dice roll determines if a player is 'white' or a 'person of color,' as well as their gender and socioeconomic status—'below the poverty line, middle class [or] wealthy.' While playing, specific events prompt players to pick cards that establish their character's 'vitality,' which ultimately influences their movement on the board symbolizing a lifetime." (Insider Reveals Hospital Forced Progressive Social Justice Indoctrination On Medical Trainee by Joshua Klein). We feared these visits [by Josef Mengele] more than anything else, because we never knew whether we would be permitted to live. He [Mengele] was free to do whatever he pleased with us. (I Was A Doctor In Auschwitz by Gisela Perl). Seeking to transform medical students into social justice warriors, and replace the practice of medicine with the promotion of race based and gender based ideologies, today's medical schools have been given a green light by the establishment to mangle the medical profession and reverse the Hippocratic Oath. It has been given a green light to do as much harm as possible.

SOVIET BANKS OPEN ACROSS THE WEST

It was established in October 1921 at 12 Neglinnaya Street in Moscow, and on December 20, 1991, it was dissolved. Its currency was the Soviet ruble. Its aim was to impose totalitarian control on industry, utilizing bank balances and transaction records to surveil the activities of state enterprises and ensure compliance with the Communist Party's five year plans and directives. This fearsome lash of communist economic policy was known as the State Bank of the USSR, and it was part of a triad of state control over economic life in the Soviet Union, whose other members were the State Planning Committee and the State Committee for Technical Supply. In the twenty first century, thirty years after the fall of the Communist Bloc, Soviet banking is back in business in a new home, revived by a Marxist movement which has swept through the West. Its offices are in every major bank in Europe and America, and its aim is to deny financial services to the opponents of far left ideologies and party lines. Its aim is to ensure compliance with the tenets of political correctness and cancel dissenters from the new gender, race and class regime. It is supported by people and governments throughout the West and is a juggernaut of the establishment, consolidating a Marxist monoculture whose single crop is the subversion of Western Enlightenment civilization. Today's banks have issued a manifesto of debanking which resurrects the dark past of the Soviet Union as it reflects the terminal stage of Western culture. The manifesto of the new twenty first century Soviet planners proclaims that a progressive bank excludes customers with libertarian political views. A progressive bank enforces Marxist environmental, social and governance policies and deplatforms the voices of freedom and capitalism. A progressive bank excludes activists for the cause of limited government. A progressive bank excludes controversialists for the cause of individual rights. A progressive bank discriminates against customers with the wrong political beliefs, customers who reject affirmative action policies and support a race blind and gender blind society. A progressive bank discriminates against customers who reject climate change doomsday politics, who support technological progress, and support the success and survival of civilization: "In the wake of President's Donald Trump's assertion that US banks are debanking Americans with conservative political views, Congress is now investigating. The matter was discussed on Sunday Morning Futures with Maria Bartiromo on the Fox News Channel, as she asked House Oversight Committee Chairman James Comer, R-Ky: 'Are you investigating whether or not US banks are debanking conservatives?' 'Yes, we are,' Comer replied. 'We've heard numerous instances of conservatives being debanked. And what we want to know is, is this a process of the banks' ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) policy? or is this our government stepping in like what we found with Twitter and Facebook where the government stepped in and said they wanted certain conservatives deplatformed and censored and certain conservative content removed. We want to know, again, is this government involvement, another dirty trick by the Joe Biden administration, or this just bad liberal [leftist] policy that discriminates against conservatives by the banks.' Bartiromo noted: 'Wow. So you have evidence of some banks debanking conservatives.' 'Yes,' said Comer, 'especially people that were involved in different energy type businesses and things like that as well as very well spoken or outspoken conservative activists. So there are numerous instances, enough to open an investigation. 'Again, is this ESG policy? Which is discriminatory and, ironically, the Democrats have passed all this banking legislation that prohibits discrimination. Is this discriminatory because of ESG, or is it the government, are the bank examiners, as President Trump hinted in his remarks you played earlier, are these bank examiners with a wink and a nod saying don't let this person bank at your bank?'

Bartiromo added: 'Well, this is a very important question because with we know what happened with social media. One thousand people from government agencies were working with social media to censor Americans, censor conservatives, certainly. What will be the impact to these banks? What should these banks expect in the coming month from your office?' Comer responded: 'Well, they're going to be asked a lot of questions, and I will say this for the banks, during the Biden influence peddling investigation, the banks were the one entity that did cooperate with us. So I expect that the banks will cooperate with our questions. And, hopefully, we can get some answers. Number one, find out if our government was involved in this, if this is another side operation by the Biden administration where they were attacking conservatives. At the very least, we want to change this. We're not talking about debanking meaning they denied a loan. That happens every day in the banking world. This is just opening up saving accounts and checking accounts. I mean this is unheard of, to do this, and it's against the law. The laws, ironically, that the Democrats created against discrimination.' During a virtual appearance Thursday at the World Economic Forum, President Trump, who himself was debanked by two Florida based financial institutions, called out Bank of America CEO Brian Moynihan, saying: 'I hope you start opening your bank to conservatives because many conservatives complain that the banks are not allowing them to do business within the bank, and that included a place called Bank of America.' First Lady Melania Trump indicated in an October 2024 interview that she herself had been debanked due to her political beliefs." ('This Is Unheard Of': Congress Now Investigating 'Numerous Instances' Of Banks 'Debanking' Conservatives by Joe Kovacs). Listen to the manifesto of today's banks. It proclaims that a progressive society shuts down the accounts of customers whose political views do not align with the values of communist, fascist, tribal societies. A progressive bank excludes customers who support Brexit and condemn the statist overreach of the European Union. A progressive bank excludes customers on the grounds of political, theological and ideological differences. A progressive bank is a successor to the Red Star hammer and sickle institutions of yesteryear, and promotes the new Marxist politics of black, feminist, gay, lesbian and transgender power. A progressive bank is a repackaged, rebranded version of Soviet era thought enforcement under the such names as NatWest, Coutts, Lloyds and Barclays. A progressive bank is run by a radical management which denies services for political reasons in a campaign to censor voices opposed to collectivist rules and regimentation. A progressive bank is a Marxist financial instrument whose executive suites echo with race and gender dogmas. A progressive bank is a religious, political, ideological culture seeking to financially starve businesses and individuals which dare to challenge the traditions and institutions of the new Marxist dispensation. A progressive bank is a revolutionary organization dedicated to defunding, debanking, derisking and stopping the operations of Western liberal civilization: "Brexit boss Nigel Farage is considering leading a class action lawsuit against the debanking practices of lenders in Britain as over 3,000 people have claimed to have had their accounts shut down. Last year, Nigel Farage sparked a political firestorm in the UK after revealing that his accounts at the NatWest banking group were shut down for political reasons, including his ties to President Donald Trump and for expressing views that do not 'align' with the bank's values. The scandal resulted in the sacking of NatWest CEO Dame Alison Rose after it was revealed that she had leaked the Brexit leader's private financial details to the BBC while falsely trying to claim that the decision to debank Farage was not political. In the wake of the scandal, Mr Farage set up a campaign to represent British citizens who have been unjustly debanked for political reasons. A little more than six months since then, it has been revealed that nearly 3,000 people have told the campaign they believe they were debanked. According to the Mail on Sunday, NatWest was cited the most by people claiming to have been debanked, making up 19.2 per cent of those who contacted the campaign. A further 57 individuals alleged that NatWest's subsidiary Coutts, the same bank that closed Mr Farage's accounts, had shut their accounts unfairly. Barclays was next on the list, with 412 allegations, HSBC with 245, and 172 at Lloyds. The banks all claimed that they do not shut down accounts over political differences. Speaking to the paper, Mr

Farage said: 'Accountclosed.org is now potentially a very powerful tool to fight back against the debanking scandal and demonstrates the seriousness of this problem.' 'There is a very real possibility of class action. It is notable that, according to the research, NatWest is among the worst offenders,' he added. The Brexit boss went on to say that he has told his lawyers to explore if NatWest had violated any laws by shutting down his account. Mr Farage said that he also plans to launch legal proceedings against the bank within the coming days if NatWest refuses to settle a compensation claim, cover his legal costs, and make a pledge to never shut down a customer's account for political reasons again." (Nigel Farage Considers Class Action Lawsuit Against Big Banks, As Thousands Claim Debanking by Kurt Zindulka). In 1921 in Russia, the People's Commissariat for Finance established Gosbank, the Soviet State Bank, and set forth its aim: "It is established with the purpose to use loans and other bank transactions to assist the development of industry, agriculture and trade turnover, and with the purpose of concentrating money turnover and taking other measures aimed at the establishment of the right monetary circulation." In the West in the twenty first century, the Soviet nightmare has come back to life and continued under new names and new faces. The mass popularity of Marxism has seen Gosbanks set up in major cities to assist the development, circulation and concentration of Marxist money, revenue, profits, trade and industry, and to consolidate the power of the establishment. The opponents of Marxist identity politics and the Green New Deal have been canceled, excluded, discredited and debanked by today's financial institutions in a campaign to suppress freedom of speech and overthrow liberal democracy.

THE NEW CAMPRACHICOS

The Comprachicos were a hideous and nondescript association of wanderers, famous in the 17th century, forgotten in the 18th, unheard of in the 19th. They traded in children, buying and selling them, but not stealing them. They made of these children monsters. The populace needs to laugh, and kings too. The montebank is wanted in the street, the jester at the Louvre; the one is called a clown, the other a fool. By the artificial production of teratological cases, the Comprachicos developed a science and practiced an art. They kneaded the features, stunted growth, and fashioned hunchbacks and dwarfs; the court fool was their specialty. Doctor Conquest, member of the Amen Street College, and judicial visitor of the pharmacists' shops of London wrote a Latin treatise on this pseudosurgery. Justus of Carrickfergus states that a monk named Avonmore was its inventor. A remarkable specimen of this science was Perkeo, the dwarf of the Elector Palatine. Another type of manufactured monster was that. utilized by the Sultan and by the Pope; in the one case for the Seraglio, in the other for the Sistine Chapel. (The Man Who Laughs by Victor Hugo). The distorters of people, the impresarios of horror, the surgeons of sadism, the mutilators of the young, the producers of child monsters. These were the comprachicos, gangs in European folklore who crippled and deformed children to work as beggars, jesters, court dwarfs and freak show performers. The term was coined by Victor Hugo in his 1869 novel The Man Who Laughs, and the novel created a moral panic across Europe, creating fears of "cripple factories" hidden in communities. In the twenty first century, these creatures of literary nightmares have come alive and commenced a rampage. Brought to life by the currents of Marxist electricity, they have formed a juggernaut invading families, homes, schools and offices. They have acquired a new name and a new flag under which they conduct their mission, but as in the pages of legend, they continue to strike abject fear in the hearts of decent, civilized people. They are transgender activists and their victims are children, whose minds and bodies they seek to deform through the application of a religion born in the fever swamps of cultural degeneration. This religion, called transgenderism, is as criminal as it is insane, was widespread during the dying centuries of ancient Rome, promoted by the infamous third century Roman Emperor Elagabalus, and is widespread today, promoted by Marxists in their campaign to undermine the Enlightenment foundations of Western liberal capitalist civilization. Listen to it and hear the death knell sound for an evidence based science and social order. Listen to the manifesto of the evil doctors of today and see ancient child killers at work in classrooms throughout the West. Their manifesto proclaims that there is no biological reality at the basis of gender. It proclaims that males who identify as females are females. It proclaims that males who identify as females have the right to enter private spaces reserved for females and place them in danger. It proclaims that a progressive society denies the findings of empirical science and denies the unchangeable genetic basis of gender. It proclaims that gender is something internal, subjective, indeterminate, and based on feelings and not facts. It proclaims that there exists no scientific, biological categories called male or female. It proclaims that a progressive society is run by gender ideologues who have declared war on scientific inquiry and public safety. It proclaims that people who refer to themselves as members of the opposite sex are entitled to enjoy the same opportunities and legal rights as those members. It proclaims that human gender is based on subjective identity and social fiat and not the facts of chromosomal reality. It proclaims that human gender is whatever an individual evaluates his or her gender to be, and can change from moment to moment. It proclaims that the science of genetics must be replaced by gender ideology and the recognition that there exists a rainbow of genders, a multicolored band, each of which carries the radiation of mental destruction: "Across the country, ideologues who deny the biological reality of sex have increasingly used legal and other socially coercive means to permit men to self identify as women and gain access to intimate single sex spaces and activities designed for women, from women's domestic abuse shelters to women's workplace showers. This is wrong. Efforts to eradicate the biological reality of sex fundamentally attack women by depriving them of their dignity, safety and well being. The erasure of sex in language and policy has a corrosive impact not just on women but on the validity of the entire American system. Basing Federal policy on truth is critical to scientific inquiry, public safety, morale, and trust in government itself. This unhealthy road is paved by an ongoing and purposeful attack against the ordinary and longstanding use and understanding of biological and scientific terms, replacing the immutable biological reality of sex with an internal, fluid, and subjective sense of self unmoored from biological facts. Invalidating the true and biological category of woman improperly transforms laws and policies designed to protect sex based opportunities into laws and policies that undermine them, replacing longstanding, cherished legal rights and values with an identity based, inchoate social concept. Gender ideology replaces the biological category of sex with an ever shifting concept of self assessed gender identity, permitting the false claim that males can identify as and thus become women and vice versa, and requiring all institutions of society to regard this false claim as true. Gender ideology includes the idea that there is a vast spectrum of genders that are disconnected from one's sex. Gender ideology is internally inconsistent, in that it diminishes sex as an identifiable or useful category but nevertheless maintains that it is possible for a person to be born in the wrong sexed body. " (DEFENDING WOMEN FROM GENDER IDEOLOGY EXTREMISM AND RESTORING BIOLOGICAL TRUTH TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, Executive Order issued by Donald Trump, January 25, 2025). Now listen to the comprachicos in charge of today's schools and hear them march under the decadent flag of transgenderism. They proclaim that a progressive school system promotes extremist ideas and the mutability of gender. They proclaim that a progressive school system teaches children without their parents' permission that gender has no relation to biological reality and can be chosen at will. They proclaim that a progressive school system teaches children without their parents' permission that gender is a human construct and people can transition to different genders an indefinite number of times throughout their lives. A progressive school system rejects the traditions of science and the rights of parents, and kidnaps children to deform their minds with a religion which says that feelings take precedence over facts, and that their biological gender can be wished and fantasized away. A progressive school system teaches children without their parents' permission that transgender politics has primacy over the empirical methods of science. A progressive school system teaches children without their parents' permission that psychotic individuals who identify as members of the opposite sex should be treated like those members, and be allowed in those members' bathrooms, shower rooms, locker rooms and on their sports teams in the name of inclusivity. A progressive school teaches children without their parents' permission that they should be intersex, no sex and nonbinary sex, should wear women's underwear and women's leather, and should work with transgender activists and sex workers to tear down traditional marriages, families and parents. A progressive school system is a leftist school system which teaches children that a newborn baby's gender is indeterminate and can be anything the parents or the doctor desire. A progressive school system teaches children without their parents' permission that identifying as a member of the opposite sex is an imperative of their mental and physical health. A progressive school system rejects the world of reason and common sense and plunges children without their parents' permission into a twisting, bending house of terror in which nothing is anything, males are females, females are males, and gargoyles project from every corner: "Leftists running school districts in many places across America have adopted some extremist ideas these days, including transgenderism–especially after the Joe Biden-Kamala Harris administration spent four years promoting it. And sometimes they've used their positions to select materials that indoctrinate children with such ideologies. Sometimes they let parents opt their children out of what the families consider offensive material, but not always. And in one of those cases, the Supreme Court now will intervene. [The law firm] Becket confirmed the high court agreed to decide whether parents can opt their children out of such teaching in one Maryland district. 'Cramming down controversial gender ideology on three year olds without their parents' permission is an affront to our nation's traditions, parental rights, and basic human decency,' explained Becket senior counsel Eric Baxter. 'The court must make clear: parents, not the state, should be the ones deciding how and when to introduce their children to sensitive issues about gender and sexuality.' The case being taken up by the court is Mahmoud v. Taylor, involving the Montgomery County, Md, Board of Education, which 'took away parental notice and opt outs for storybooks' that celebrate 'gender transitioning, pride parades, and pronoun preferences with kids as young as three and four.' Becket's report said older students can opt out when similar topics are introduced during high school health class. But not in the early grades. The school 'inclusivity' promotions were announced in 2022 for students in pre-K through fifth grade, and, Becket explained, they 'champion controversial ideology around gender and sexuality.' " (Supreme Court Takes Up Fight Over School Pushing Radicalized Storybooks On Children by Bob Unruh). Johannes Gehrts was a German illustrator active in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. His illustrations appeared in children's books and depicted scenes from Germanic and Norse mythology. His most famous illustration is the 1899 personification of death in the form of the goddess Hel, who appears with her wolf Garmr, the blood stained guardian of the gate opening into her underworld. Taking over classrooms and programming children in dogmas destroying young minds and young bodies, today's transgender activists are Grim Reapers coming to collect their souls.

THE BUCKEYE STATE'S RACE AND GENDER JUNGLE

Its nicknames have inspired generations of residents. It is called the Heart Of It All, the Birthplace Of Aviation, because it is the state where the Wright Brothers were born, and the Mother Of Presidents, because seven American presidents were born there. The first astronaut to walk on the moon, Neil Armstrong, was born there. Two of its native residents, Jerry Seigel and Joe Shuster, created the Superman comic strip character fighting totalitarian evil throughout the world. This American heartland, originating from the Seneca Indian word meaning "great river," is called Ohio, and in the twenty first century, its twelve million residents have repudiated its heritage and traditions and descended into one hundred percent unAmericanism. In the twenty first century, the seventh most populous state in the Union, beautified by blazing green Buckeye trees which have earned it another nickname, the Buckeye State, has been blackened by a religion opposed to everything America stands for. It has been blackened by a religion of antiEnlightenment which says that groups are more important than people and individuals are defined by the groups to which they belong. In the twenty first century, Ohio is no longer Ohio in spirit but has become submerged in a fever swamp whose disease vectors have struck every resident in the state. The people are on fire from a malaria of the mind which has caused them to jettison all forms of morality. The people shiver and are delirious as they rage against the liberal order which demands equal protection of all before the law. The people are white hot in a state of nervous excitement as they clamor for the withdrawal of legal rights and recognition from flesh and blood individuals and the granting of recognition to mystical tribes. The people have issued a manifesto from the sewers of the nation setting forth the tenets of a gutter religion. It is a religion as far apart from American values as heaven is from hell, and its widespread acceptance by the people in the twenty first century, by the residents of the first postcolonial free state admitted to the American Union on March 1, 1803, is a symptom of just how sick America and the West have become. This religion is known as Marxism; it is the number one religion of our time; and it has captured Ohio, abolished its pioneering freedom, and composed a new tribalist, collectivist regime. Listen to what the people, the institutions and the establishment of Ohio have to say about the best way to select people for jobs at universities. The people's manifesto of the new Marxist jungle which is Ohio proclaims that a progressive university promotes illegal discrimination on the basis of race and gender. A progressive university rejects merit based opportunity in favor of race and gender based opportunity. A progressive university defends racist and sexist hiring because it achieves diversity, inclusion, and the highest form of fairness, called equity. A progressive university violates civil rights laws by granting preferences to women and nonwhite faculty candidates. A progressive university screens faculty candidate pools for women and nonwhites, and excludes white males. A progressive university orders faculty search committees to hire black scholars. A progressive university hires professors from Senegal and the Caribbean. A progressive university subordinates the merit selection of professors to selection to achieve diversity. A progressive university preferentially hires women and nonwhites to teach because they are women and nonwhites as a means of achieving inclusive excellence. A progressive university selects finalists for teaching posts on the basis of race and gender. A progressive university hires professors who reflect population demographics. A progressive university refuses to comply with civil rights laws mandating equal treatment for all job candidates. A progressive university is a black nation administered by a fascist master race. A progressive university circulates messages of hate and prejudice toward white male faculty candidates. A progressive university is run by deans and chairpersons directing that women and nonwhite faculty candidates pass all tests and interviews on the way to be hired and white male candidates fail them. A progressive university hires Native American women scholars because they are Native American women in the name of acquiring the best professors to teach indigenous studies. A progressive university ranks faculty candidates on the basis of race and moves white candidates off candidate lists. A progressive university is run by diversity, equity and inclusion officers who have revived the spirit of Hitler's Nuremberg laws and established explicit discrimination in faculty hiring on the basis of race and sex: "President Trump’s new executive order, Ending Illegal Discrimination And Restoring Merit Based Opportunity, has doubtless already sent America’s college administrators scrambling. The order unequivocally declares that 'race and sex based preferences,' often doled out under the guise of diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) mandates, 'can violate the civil rights laws of this Nation.' It calls on federal agencies to compile lists of institutions—including universities 'with endowments over 1 billion dollars'—for potential compliance investigations. Certain Ivy League universities can doubtless expect federal scrutiny. But according to documents I’ve acquired through public records requests, Vice President JD Vance’s alma mater, the Ohio State University, could also warrant a place on that list. These internal emails reveal that OSU administrators screened faculty candidate pools for racial and gender diversity, granting approval for slates of finalists partly on the basis of those finalists' collective diversity. The paper trail, which includes messages between search committee chairs and Ohio State deans, is devastating. First, some background. In a previous piece for the Wall Street Journal, I unpacked hundreds of pages of 'diversity recruitment reports' created by Ohio State faculty search committees. One report, on the university's search for a French and Francophone Studies scholar 'with a specialization in Black France,' admitted that the search committee practiced racial discrimination: 'The Search committee members were keenly aware of the need to prioritize the hiring of a visible minority especially given the nature of the job description,' the report stated, and 'thus selected a pool of 12 candidates for initial Zoom interviews that reflected this exigency.' After conducting those interviews, the search committee confirmed the priority: 'In our deliberations to select finalists, the importance of bringing Black scholars to campus was deemed to be essential. We thus chose three Black candidates, two of whom are of Caribbean descent and one from Senegal.' Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, of course, prohibits most forms of racial discrimination in hiring. One might therefore expect administrators to have flagged the search committee's report for exposing the university to legal trouble. Instead, as this new batch of emails confirms, administrators enthusiastically approved of the committee's work. According to these records, Dana Renga, divisional dean of arts and humanities, reviewed the eight page French and Francophone Studies search report. That report included eyebrow raising passages, such as the admission that the committee had collectively 'decided that diversity was just as important as perceived merit as we made our selections.' Renga, in an email to the search committee chair, merely flagged that the report failed to note whether two members of the search committee had taken Ohio State's mandatory 'Searching for Inclusive Excellence' training. After the committee fixed its error, Renga emailed Korie Little Edwards, interim associate dean of diversity, equity, and inclusion: 'I read earlier and noticed that not all training dates were included. Now they look great and an exciting slate of campus visit finalists.' Edwards's response? 'I approve this slate.' This confirms that at least some Ohio State search committees reviewed prospective faculty members' applications with the knowledge that multiple administrators would scrutinize their proposed finalists' demographics. Renga, in another instance, had written to Edwards regarding finalists for a Department of Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies role, noting the 'diverse process, pool, and finalist list.' Remarkably, Edwards once again responded: 'I approve this slate of candidates.' This policy almost certainly induced members of university search committees to select finalists based on candidates' race and sex. According to these emails, another search committee, looking for a professor of indigenous studies, emphasized in an email to Regna that it was 'incredibly fortunate to have found three fantastic Native women scholars/candidates who all identify as Native (with tribal affiliations).' Renga responded that she was 'also pleased with this diversity report and support their campus visit finalist list based upon recruitment and diversity of finalists.' Edwards once again added: 'I approve.' When Ohio State delivered these records, a spokesperson noted that the university had updated its hiring policy to ensure decisions would be made without regard to race, sex, or other demographic categories. But the university's leadership, including its new president, Ted Carter, would be wise to review closely the university's hiring practices to ensure that they don't place the university in legal jeopardy." (Ohio State University Hired Based On Race And Gender, Emails Show by John Sailor). Ohio's world famous buckeye trees are as pleasing to the senses as they are dangerous and life threatening. Beneath the green fire of the buckeye forests, the seeds, foliage, shoots and bark are poisonous and can kill people and livestock. In the twenty first century, Ohio has become politically, morally and culturally poisonous. Beneath a superficial cover of legality lies treason to America promoting the Marxist cancer of race and gender politics.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AIR CONTROLLERS ATTACK WASHINGTON

On January 29, 2025, frozen death floated down the Potomac River. On this day, American Eagle Flight 5342, a domestic passenger flight, collided in mid air with a United States Army Blackhawk helicopter near Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport in Washington DC. The crash killed all the passengers on board the flights, sixty seven people. As a trail of fire swept through the sky, and a spray of sparks rained down on the ground, and searchlights probed the dark, murky depths, and fireboats transported debris from the crash site, and divers looked in vain for survivors, and search and recovery operations pulled bodies out of the river, and departure and arrival boards at the airport went blank, a grim reality reared its head. This horror in the sky, this mid air collision between an airplane and a helicopter, was the latest chapter, a chapter written in blood, of the story of our times. It is the story of Marxist inspired identity politics and its affirmative action policies, and it has spread moral and physical death and destruction throughout society. The victims of affirmative action policies are legion, and include individuals cheated out of jobs and academic placements, and individuals killed at the hands of unqualified personnel. These victims comprise a litany of disgrace which has encapsulated a degenerate culture crashing down in a state of free fall. In the icy waters of the Potomac River, the American Airlines plane was found inverted and broken up into three pieces. Next to it, shattered beyond recognition, was Western civilization. At 8:48 pm local time, the control tower at Reagan National sent out an alert of a plane crash. It sent out a living, breathing, on the ground condemnation of affirmative action policies. Listen to the proponents of these policies and hear an ideological roman candle blow up the legacies of the Enlightenment with the rainbow colors of gender, race and politics. Listen to the affirmative action manifesto of Marxism in the twenty first century. It proclaims that a progressive society violates liberal civil rights laws protecting individuals from discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex or national origin. A progressive society rejects the liberal principle of equal opportunity for all. A progressive society establishes race and sex preferences in every sector of activity, and makes corporations, institutions, industries, airlines, schools and offices racist and sexist to their core. A progressive society justifies racist and sexist policies which discriminate against white males as the achievement of diversity, inclusion and accessibility, and calls immoral and unfair discriminatory practices the highest forms of morality and fairness. A progressive society rejects the traditional values of merit, aptitude, talent, ability, initiative, ambition, determination and hard work in favor of rewarding job applicants in accordance with their tribal identities. A progressive society is a political jungle rejecting individual rights and character, and screaming with race and gender preferences, exclusion and prejudicial treatment: "Section 1. Purpose. Longstanding Federal civil rights laws protect individual Americans from discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. These civil rights protections serve as a bedrock supporting equality of opportunity for all Americans. As President, I have a solemn duty to ensure that these laws are enforced for the benefit of all Americans. Yet today, roughly 60 years after the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, critical and influential institutions of American society, including the Federal Government, major corporations, financial institutions, the medical industry, large commercial airlines, law enforcement agencies, and institutions of higher education have adopted and actively use dangerous, demeaning, and immoral race and sex based preferences under the guise of socalled 'diversity, equity, and inclusion' (DEI) or 'diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility' (DEIA) that can violate the civil rights laws of this Nation. Illegal DEI and DEIA policies not only violate the text and spirit of our longstanding Federal civil rights laws, they also undermine our national unity, as they deny, discredit, and undermine the traditional American values of hard work, excellence, and individual achievement in favor of an unlawful, corrosive, and pernicious identity based spoils system. Hardworking Americans who deserve a shot at the American Dream should not be stigmatized, demeaned, or shut out of opportunities because of their race or sex. These illegal DEI and DEIA policies also threaten the safety of American men, women, and children across the Nation by diminishing the importance of individual merit, aptitude, hard work, and determination when selecting people for jobs and services in key sectors of American society, including all levels of government, and the medical, aviation, and law enforcement communities. Yet in case after tragic case, the American people have witnessed first hand the disastrous consequences of illegal, pernicious discrimination that has prioritized how people were born instead of what they were capable of doing. The Federal Government is charged with enforcing our civil rights laws. The purpose of this order is to ensure that it does so by ending illegal preferences and discrimination." (Ending Illegal Discrimination And Restoring Merit Based Opportunity, Executive Order, Donald Trump, January 21, 2025). Now listen to the manifesto of affirmative action and hear two aircraft explode into fireballs on January 29, 2025 and kill all those on board. Listen to the killers proclaim that a progressive Department of Transportation sacrifices the merit selection of air traffic controllers on the altar of race and gender diversity, inclusion, and a higher form of equity which rejects ordinary fairness. A progressive Department of Transportation topples the towers of air traffic control and grounds them into the radical earth of race and gender preferences. A progressive Department of Transportation hires air traffic controllers who suffer from intellectual and character disorders, such as psychoses, in the name of diversity. A progressive Department of Transportation hires air traffic controllers who are deaf or blind in the name of diversity. A progressive Department of Transportation hires air traffic controllers who are paralyzed in the name of diversity. A progressive Department of Transportation hires air traffic controllers who suffer from seizures and epilepsy in the name of diversity. A progressive Department of Transportation hires air traffic controllers who are dwarfs in the name of diversity. A progressive Department of Transportation lowers standards for hiring air traffic controllers in order to accommodate unqualified blacks and women. A progressive Department of Transportation does not require individuals seeking to become air traffic controllers to possess any superior intellectual or psychological skills, because this traditional requirement would exclude the mass of black and female candidates and prevent the department from filling its race and gender quotas: "President Donald Trump slammed former Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg and former President Joe Biden over diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiated in the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) under the Biden administration following the horrific collision between a passenger plane and a Black Hawk helicopter over the Potomac River in Washington, DC, on Wednesday. Trump addressed members of the media in the James S. Brady Press Briefing Room on Thursday, hours after the crash that left no survivors, killing 64 aboard American Airlines flight 5342 and 3 service members aboard the Black Hawk. Trump hammered Buttigieg, who oversaw the FAA as transportation secretary before Trump was sworn in as president just ten days ago. 'Do you know how badly everything's run since he's run the Department of Transportation? He's a disaster,' Trump said. 'He was a disaster as a mayor. He ran his city into the ground, and he's a disaster now. He's just got a good line of bullshit.' Trump said Buttigieg ran the Department of Transportation 'right into the ground with his diversity.' Trump highlighted a January 14 Fox News article titled FAA's Diversity Push Includes Focus On Hiring People With 'Severe Intellectual' And 'Psychiatric' Disabilities, detailing the FAA's DEI push in the final days of the Biden administration. Trump then paraphrased the subheading, 'FAA says people with severe disabilities are most underrepresented segment of the workforce,' contending that the Biden administration wanted to put DEI hires in the roles of 'air traffic controllers.' 'This was January 14, so that was a week before I entered office. They put a big push to put diversity into the FAA's program,' he said. According to the Fox News article, which cited the Biden era FAA website, individuals with a wide range of substantial disabilities were being targeted for FAA recruitment: 'Targeted disabilities are those disabilities that the Federal government, as a matter of policy, has identified for special emphasis in recruitment and hiring,' the FAA's website states. 'They include hearing, vision, missing extremities, partial paralysis, complete paralysis, epilepsy, severe intellectual disability, psychiatric disability and dwarfism.' Trump also had heavy criticism for Biden and former President Barack Obama, saying Obama's standards for the FAA were 'very mediocre' before he assumed office in 2017. 'I changed the Obama standards from very mediocre at best to extraordinary,' Trump said, adding: 'You remember that. Only the highest aptitude–they have to be the highest intellect and psychologically superior people–were allowed to qualify for air traffic controllers. That was not so prior to getting there. When I arrived in 2016 I made that change very early on because I always felt this was a job that, and other jobs too, but this was a job that had to be superior intelligence.' " (Trump Calls Out Pete Buttigieg's 'Bullshit',' Biden Era DEI After Fatal American Airlines, Black Hawk Crash by Nick Gilbertson). A lawyer. A university student. Airline officers. Figure skating champions. A helicopter crew. Installers of heating, ventilating and refrigerating equipment. They were a cross section of society and they plunged their friends and families into mourning when they lost their lives on January 29, 2025. The mourning saw wreathes of flowers brought and memorials constructed in honor of the victims. The garlands formed a rainbow of colors. They projected the spectrum of Marxist identity politics and the dark light of affirmative action mass murder.

HOMER CANCELED

He is one of the most revered and influential authors in history. He wrote two epics which depict man's struggle against adversity and his triumph through superior character and intelligence. Describing the extraordinary deeds of extraordinary figures, his works exalt heroism, glory and honor. Plato describes him as "the man who taught Greece." In Dante's Divine Comedy, Virgil describes him as "the king of all poets." Alexander Pope describes him as "the greatest of all poets." From antiquity to the present day, his works have inspired literature, music, art and films the world over. His name is Homer. Active in the eighth century BC, this author of the two foundational works of ancient Greek literature, The Illiad and The Odyssey, used as school texts by the ancient Greeks and Romans and the first works taught to students, has been canceled in the twenty first century on the charge of political incorrectness. Demanding conformity to the prevailing orthodoxy and the avoidance of all forms of thought, speech or expression which exclude, marginalize, criticize or insult members of protected groups established by this orthodoxy, the jackboots running today's universities have canceled Homer, Classical civilization, the Enlightenment and Western civilization, and established an academic monoculture raising the single stultifying crop of mental obedience and unity. In the ideological greenhouse, hot house and echo chamber which characterizes today's universities, Marxism is rank and grows luxuriantly; it crawls across the floor, walls and ceiling; and it has shouted out a manifesto of control and indoctrination which has lowered the curtain on reason, science, freedom and the humanities, and composed the terrifying epitaph of the West. Listen to this manifesto and hear Homer and human flourishing canceled and the resurrected regimes of Soviet Russia and national socialist Germany installed into power. The manifesto of the twenty first century academic establishment proclaims that a progressive university mandates that special statements be placed at the start of Homer's works alerting the student to the distressing, politically incorrect content they contain. A progressive university warns students that Homer's politically incorrect treatment of the subjects of rape, sexual violence and infant mortality will make them feel uncomfortable and they are justified in walking out of the classroom, contacting psychological counselors or protesting vehemently to the professor. A progressive university warns students that Homer's politically incorrect viewpoints are filthy, obscene, evil and despicable. A progressive university censors Homer by issuing trigger warnings on the grounds that he violates Marxist literary norms. A progressive university does not place trigger warnings on Marx's works because Marx's advocacy of class hate, class dictatorship, class violence, class war, class confiscation, class expropriation and class genocide is not distressing to right minded students. A progressive university does not place trigger warnings on black power literature because its advocacy of race hate, race dictatorship, race violence, race war, race confiscation, race expropriation and race genocide is not distressing to right minded students. A progressive university does not place trigger warnings on feminist literature because its advocacy of gender hate, gender dictatorship, gender violence, gender war, gender confiscation, gender expropriation and gender genocide is not distressing to right minded students. A progressive university cancels the study of world famous Western explorers, inventors, ethnologists, missionaries and statesmen, who, like Homer, cause students traumas, nightmares and panic attacks due to their politically incorrect thoughts and opinions. A progressive university replaces the study of humanist culture with the study of radical, revolutionary culture. A progressive university mandates that Homer's works be studied from the standpoint of gender, race and class politics and from no other standpoint. A progressive university rejects twenty eight centuries of Homeric studies on the grounds that they contradict the world view and party line of the people's number one, liberating, tribal religion known as Marxism: "The University of Exeter put a trigger warning on two classic pieces of ancient Greek literature, Homer's The Iliad and The Odyssey, for what it calls 'distressing' content. The school, located in England, is now warning students at the beginning of its Women in Homer course they could 'encounter views and content that they may find uncomfortable,' The Daily Mail reported. It cites themes of rape, sexual violence, and infant mortality in the two poems. Students who experience 'distress' due to the poems' contents should 'feel free to deal with it in ways that help (eg to leave the classroom, contact Wellbeing, and of course talk to the lecturer),' the university said, according to information obtained by The Daily Mail. A university spokesman told the newspaper that 'content warnings help ensure students who may be affected by specific issues are not subjected to any potential unnecessary distress.' However, a professor of humanities at Thales College in North Carolina told The College Fix the move undermines the role of higher education. 'The trigger warnings are disguised forms of anticipatory censorship. They tell the students in advance that what they are going to read is in some way filthy or stupid or wicked or contemptible,' Anthony Esolen told The Fix. 'Why you would want to teach what you despise is beyond me.' Prestigious colleges such as the University of Exeter once 'produced titans of learning in every field, explorers, inventors, ethnologists, missionaries, statesmen; now, by their own unwitting admission, they seek to produce overtouchy neurotics incapable of reading Homer without a pussycat to stroke and opioid cookies nearby,' he said. The Fix reached out to the University of Exeter's Press Office and English Department two weeks ago via email about the university's intent with the trigger warnings, but received no response. Esolen said higher education institutions likely would not place trigger warnings on what professors consider politically favored ideas, such as themes of socialism, Marxism and feminism. He said trigger warnings on any material hinder the abilities of 'genuine students of culture' to fully engage in academics. Esolen also said he is stunned by the university's 'complete lack of historical imagination,' adding that a trigger warning 'applied to the great epics of ancient Greece is utterly embarrassing.' Homer's The Iliad and The Odyssey are two epic poems that depict fictional events centered around the legendary Trojan War. The Iliad describes the tensions between Achilles and King Agamemnon during the final stages of the war, while The Odyssey chronicles the journey of Odysseus, the king of Ithaca, as he returns home after the war. Homer and his writings should not be confined to any single perspective; 'his imagination is broader than that,' the professor said. Esolen said when he attended Princeton University, he would have considered a trigger warning an insult to his intelligence. 'We would all have treated with derisive contempt anybody who suggested that students be warned about challenging material,' he said. He referenced his experience in a moral philosophy course taught by a professor with a different world view from his own, noting that he recognized disagreements as an inherent part of his university education. 'I did not find it worthy even to mention to my friends. What would be the point?' he told The Fix. Similarly, England's former Prime Minister Boris Johnson also condemned the university's decision, saying the two poems laid the 'foundation for Western Literature,' The Telegraph reported. 'Are they really saying that their students are so wet, so feeble minded and so generally namby pamby that they can't enjoy Homer?' he said. 'Is the faculty of Exeter University really saying that its students are the most quivering and pathetic in the entire 28 centuries of Homeric studies?' Johnson said." (British University Puts Trigger Warning On Greek Mythology For 'Distressing' Content by Hanna Bechtel). Today's academic establishment proclaims that a progressive university is guided by a moral and literary compass fixed at the Marxist Red Star and mandates trigger warnings on canonical texts, such as Homer's Illiad and Odyssey, on the grounds that they offend radical feminist students. A progressive university mandates trigger warnings on Homer's work on the grounds that their politically incorrect portrayal of courage and valor cause students to suffer emotional breakdowns, lose control over themselves, and storm out of the classroom: "Last night, Lord Andrew Roberts said: 'University ought to be a time when young people are stress tested for the real world, which can be a shocking place, not wrapped in cotton wool and essentially warned against ancient but central texts of the Western canon.' Frank Furedi, emeritus professor of sociology at the University of Kent, said: 'Poor old Homer. A university that decides to put a trigger warning on Homer's Iliad and Odyssey has become morally disoriented to the point that it has lost the plot. 'It is obvious that this university is unaware of the temporal distinction between the present and past and regards these foundational mythologies as if they are contemporary statements about the world.' Jeremy Black, the author of A Short History Of War, said: 'Trigger warnings proliferate like knotweed and the latest, on Women In Homer at Exeter, can surely only be a parody. 'Homer's work on the Trojan War inherently focuses on violence and is realistic precisely because heroism and cruelty are shown to be related. 'There is no need for the emotional incontinence of walking out of lectures.' " (University Chiefs Issue Trigger Warning For Undergraduates Studying Greek Mythology Warning They May Find It 'Uncomfortable and Challenging'--As Former Prime Minister Boris Johnson Slams 'Absurd' Move by Chris Hastings). Political correctness. Toeing the party line. Whipping party discipline. Listen at its early voices in the twentieth century. Listen to the demand for blind, uncritical acceptance of communist dogma without rational or moral ground: "The term politically correct was used disparagingly to refer to someone whose loyalty to the Communist Party line overrode compassion and led to bad politics. It was used by Socialists against Communists and was meant to separate out Socialists from dogmatic Communists who would advocate and defend party positions regardless of their moral substance." (Uncommon Differences: On Political Correctness, Core Curriculum And Democracy In Education by Herbert Kohl). Listen to the demand for blind, uncritical acceptance of fascist dogma, the child of communism, without rational or moral ground: "In 1934, Germany granted reporting permits only to pure Aryans whose opinions are politically correct." (The New York Times). In the twenty first century, the totalitarians have brought to life a five headed, fire breathing censorship monster called Gender, Race, Class, Culture and Sexual Orientation, and this nightmare has claimed Homer.

POSTMORTEM ON THE WEST: DEATH BY SUICIDE

Visigoths sack Rome in 410 and 455 AD. Attila sacks Italy in 452. The Battle of Tours in 732: Charles Martel defeats Muslim forces under the command of Abd Al Rahman Al Gafiqi. The Battle of Vienna in 1683: Europe defeats the Muslim Ottoman Empire. These are external invasions of civilization, attacks by hostile military powers coming from the outside, but the major cause of civilizational decline is the process of internal rot and decay. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, the West has been stricken by this internal process and in the twenty first century, the results are plain to see and stand chiseled on the tombstone of the culture. In every field of activity, the West is in a state of terminal decline, a state brought about by centuries of growing rejection of reason which had commenced with the birth of Western philosophy in the seventeenth century. The birth of Western philosophy was the death knell of human sanity in the new Faustian culture of the West, which had risen upon the ruins of the Classical Greco-Roman world. The founding philosophies and prime symbols of these two cultures are diametrically opposed, and the results of these differences are evident throughout their development. The prime symbol of Classical culture is Apollo. The god of reason, knowledge, healing and the arts, the bringer of the sun every morning, the embodiment of human beauty and bodily perfection, Apollo is synonymous with Classical rationalist culture, and the culture collapsed by the the people's rejection of Apollo in the dying centuries of ancient Rome, and by the people's embrace of mysticism. The forms of mysticism embraced were the Eastern cult of Christianity, plus state worship, emperor worship, and the worship of bread and circuses, the worship of public welfare and decadent entertainment. These forms of mysticism were alien to the Classical ethos and their widespread adoption was a symptom of a new moral disease. The prime symbol of Germanic Western Culture is Faust. A German scholar dissatisfied with his life, Faust makes a pact with the Devil at a crossroads, exchanging his soul, his reason and sanity, for infinite will, subjectivity and power. The symbol of the exaltation of consciousness over reality, Faust is synonymous with Western romanticist, subjectivist culture. The final stage of the decline of the West commencing in the twentieth century was a development from earlier stages, unlike the final stage of Classical culture, and the crash in the new millennium is the culmination of six centuries of ever increasing insanity. Classical Apollonian culture affirmed the individual in space and time as the primary existent. It affirmed the primacy of the perceived present and the world of physical bodies, shapes, forms, boundaries, outlines, statues, weight, gravity, stasis, noonday light and three dimensional Euclidean geometry. Northern, Germanic, Western Faustian culture, by contrast, rejects the existence of physical objects and affirms the primacy of consciousness, the primacy of the plains, history, memoirs, paintings, perspectives, shades, reflections, retrospects, introspections, egos, dynamics, forward movements, soaring antigravity architecture, and pure limitless space of a mind unmoored to existence: "Henceforth we shall designate the soul of the Classical Culture, which chose the sensuously present individual body as the ideal type of the extended, by the name (familiarized by Nietzsche) of the Apollonian. In opposition to it we have the Faustian soul, whose prime symbol is pure and limitless space, and whose body is the Western Culture that blossomed forth with the birth of the Romanesque style in the 10th century in the Northern plain between the Elbe and the Tagus. The nude statue is Apollonian, the art of the fugue Faustian. Apollonian are: mechanical statics, the sensuous cult of the Olympian gods, the politically individual city states of Greece, the doom of Oedipus and the phallus symbol. Faustian are: Galilean dynamics, Catholic and Protestant dogmas, the great dynasties of the Baroque with their cabinet diplomacy, the destiny of Lear and the Madonna ideal from Dante’s Beatrice to the last line of Faust II. The painting that defines the individual body by contours is Apollonian, that which forms space by means of light and shade is Faustian—this is the difference between the fresco of Polygnotus and the oil painting of Rembrandt. The Apollinian existence is that of the Greek who describes his ego as soma and who lacks all idea of an inner development and therefore all real history, inward and outward; the Faustian is an existence which is led with a deep consciousness and introspection of the ego, and a resolutely personal culture evidenced in memoirs, reflections, retrospects and prospects and conscience." (The Decline Of The West by Oswald Spengler, Chapter 6, Part 2). The fall of the West in the twenty first century is the final symptom of a moral disease present at the birth of the culture, and not the product of the rejection of starting premises, as the fall of Classical culture was. Although the Western Enlightenment affirmed, in the manner of Classical culture, the existence of physical objects and the principles of reason, truth, empiricism and objectivity, and led to the Scientific and Industrial Revolutions which were the wonders and marvels of mankind, there were strong countertrends and countermovements at work during the Enlightenment which would lead to its demise, and would return the West to its Faustian roots. Both the Renaissance and the Enlightenment were doomed because they opposed the foundational undercurrents of Faustian subjectivity, and the Enlightenment was succeeded by the truly Western Age of Romanticism and by the downward development of the culture. The first voice of the Faustian countermovement during the alien Enlightenment is revered as the Father of Modern Philosophy. He is in fact the father of Western philosophy, because what is called ancient philosophy belongs to Classical culture and not to the West, and his name is Rene Descartes. In pure Faustian manner he proclaims that the existence of physical objects is not something which is directly perceived and self evidently known. Man perceives only the inner world of his own ideas and not any external physical objects. Nothing can be known with certainty to exist, no sun, planets, tables, chairs, other people or one's own body, beyond the existence of one's own consciousness. The only statements which can be known to be true are I am, therefore I exist and I think, therefore I am: "I have convinced myself that there is nothing in the world —no sky, no earth, no minds, no bodies. Doesn't it follow that I don't exist? No, surely I must exist if it's me who is convinced of something. But there is a deceiver, supremely powerful and cunning whose aim is to see that I am always deceived. But surely I exist, if I am deceived. Let him deceive me all he can, he will never make it the case that I am nothing while I think that I am something. Thus having fully weighed every consideration, I must finally conclude that the statement I am, therefore I exist must be true whenever I state it or mentally consider it. I think, therefore I am." (Meditations On First Philosophy by Rene Descartes). The most influential philosopher in the West after Descartes is the second leading voice of the Faustian countermovement during the Enlightenment. His name is Immanuel Kant. He proclaims his psychotic aim which encapsulates the Faustian character of the West: "I have found it necessary to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). To deny knowledge: a forthright statement of schizophrenic breakdown reverberating in the mind of Dr Faust. To deny knowledge: an official statement of Western Faustian mental disorder which sane, civilized people have had to read to believe. To deny knowledge: a call to arms to classes of misfits and malcontents to rise up and storm the ramparts of human progress and flourishing. Listen to Kant proclaim that the perceived world of physical objects is a universal, collective delusion produced by our functioning visual system. Our eyes are fixed screens implanted within us which forever prevent us from grasping ultimate reality which is nonphysical. Socalled physical objects are not physical but are mere subjective appearances. While common sense affirms the distinction between a person being blind and a person possessing sight, true philosophy denies this distinction and recognizes that there is never any sight, that man never sees, that when man perceives something, he perceives nothing, and that man is blind because he has eyes: "Since then the receptivity of the subject, its power to be affected by objects, must necessarily precede all actual perceptions of these objects, it can readily be understood how the form of all appearances can be given before all actual perceptions, and so exist in the mind apriori." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). The history of philosophy in the wake of Kant is a footnote on his philosophy, and is a history of human thought vanishing into the tar and asphalt of subjectivity filling the Kantian lake to overflowing. In the twenty first century, human thought has vanished into the tar and asphalt and bubbles have stopped rising to the surface. In the wake of Kant, formalism holds sway over the arts and sciences. In the wake of Kant, knowledge is held to be pure form and pure space; knowledge is held to be a construct of gender, race, class, culture and sexual orientation; logic is held to be pure form and pure space; geometry is held to be pure form and pure space; algebra is held to be pure form and pure space; morality is held to be pure form, pure obedience, without regard to consequences, good and just or evil and unjust, either to oneself or to others; music is held to be pure form without melody; painting and sculpture are held to be pure forms without representational content; architecture is held to be pure form without function, despite protestations by Modernists that "form follows function," for both Modern and Postmodern architecture subordinate utility and comfort to the production of ideological statements; literature is held to be pure form without plot, story, meaning or ordered sequences of events; texts are held to be pure form without content or reference, endlessly deconstructable and interpretable; meanings are held to be purely internal and relational and to signify nothing. Philosophers who call themselves postmodernist are not in fact postmodernist but postEnlightenment philosophers, inasmuch as modern philosophy is largely inspired by Kant, and what it rejects is the Enlightenment. Modern philosophy, minus the Enlightenment, is irrational Cartesian and Kantian philosophy, and socalled postmodern philosophers are in fact modern philosophers. The Faustian assault on reason in the twenty first century has invited other players, in addition to Kantians, onto the stage. It has invited the advocates of nationalism and ethnocentrism. It has invited the advocates of the old time Abrahamic religions. A resurgent traditional Catholicism and evangelical Protestantism have taken over courts and legislatures and breached the separation between church and state, allowing states to proclaim that human personhood commences at the moment of conception, that a one celled zygote is a human person by virtue of the infusion of a supernatural soul, and that abortion is always murder. A resurgent Islam has organized global networks and conspiracies of theocracies and terror. A resurgent Orthodox Judaism has launched a culture war against the liberal, secular nation of Israel, and against secular practices throughout the West. The twenty first century stage is crowded with players. They jostle for power and influence. They offer the poison of antiEnlightenment as a cure and as an antidote. Before raised curtains, blazing spotlights and cheering throngs, they compose the final act of the West. Then the curtains lower and the lights go out. The End.

BRITAIN ON REWIND

Stonehenge. A prehistoric megalithic structure on Salisbury Plain in England. Stonehenge. A monument in ruins, dating back to the Neolithic Age five thousand years ago, consisting of rings of massive vertical stones connected by horizontal lintels, plus a trilithon, two vertical stones connected by a lintel, at the center. Stonehenge. A monument aligned toward the rising sun on the day of the solstice, enabling ancient astronomers to track the movement of the sun and mark the changing of the seasons. Stonehenge. One of the most famous monuments in Britain, a national cultural icon and a UNESCO World Heritage Site. In the twenty first century, the British people, embracing a Marxist agenda of green politics and radical environmentalism, have commenced a movement to abolish farmland and return the nation to the wilderness of Stonehenge. Rejecting industrial and technological civilization, today's Marxists seek to turn back the clock to the year zero, wipe out humanity, and render "this England, this precious stone set in the silver sea" unrecognizable. In a terrifying illustration of just how sick Britain and the West have become in the twenty first century, the radical masses of Britain have issued a manifesto for the destruction of civilization and the return of the nation to something unimaginable to sane people, the return to forests, open areas, uncultivated land and vast desolation, the return to a proliferation of savagery, ignorance, wild species and primordial states. Listen to the manifesto and see the negative print of a nation which pioneered land, labor and manufacturing advancement. Hear a nation seek to convert its agricultural land into nine million hectares of diseased hatred and rejection of human existence. Hear the nation which gave the world the Agricultural and Industrial Revolutions, from the mid seventeenth through to the early nineteenth centuries, disappear into a shadow of its former self, grow weary of human life and human flourishing, and fold up and die. The manifesto of the twenty first century, Marxist, green party, antiBritain of today proclaims that a progressive society reverts to primitivism in the name of reaching climate targets and achieving zero carbon emissions. A progressive society reverts to the Neolithic and Bronze Ages in the name of realizing environmental and climate benefits. A progressive society reverts to primitivism in the name of achieving nature restoration. A progressive society abolishes food production in order to return the land to natural processes and grow biofuels. A progressive society shuts down farm businesses in the name of reducing greenhouse gas pollution. A progressive society tells farmers what they can and cannot grow, plant and raise on their own lands in order to achieve socially responsible land use. A progressive society affirms that the only sustainable farming techniques are no farming techniques at all. A progressive society is a regressive society which demands the abolition of farming in the name of adhering to green regulations. A progressive society rejects science, sanity, sound judgment and the evidence of the senses, and converts farms into uninhabited wastelands. A progressive society makes land unsuitable for growing crops and reduces the nation to grasslands, grazing areas and rocky fields. A progressive society taxes farmland, farm production and farm wealth out of existence in the name of achieving a just distribution of wealth. A progressive society shuts down farms in the name of restoring the primacy of the natural environment. A progressive society shuts down farms in the name of achieving proper environmental land management. A progressive society abolishes food production and food self sufficiency in the name of achieving proper soil use. A progressive society takes land away from farmers in the name of allowing nature to achieve its full potential and plunges mankind into extinction: "Almost one tenth of England's farmland will need to be converted to low carbon use such as woodland or heath by 2050 in order for the country to hit its climate targets, according to government estimates published on Friday. About 760,000 hectares—or 9 per cent of England's agricultural land—will need to 'change away from agricultural land for environmental and climate benefits,' it said. A further 9 per cent will need to change to accommodate climate benefits, such as sustainable farming practices. The National Farmers' Union has warned that the sector is already being forced to scale back food production in favor of alternatives such as rewilding or growing crops for biofuels in order to keep their businesses viable. Losing additional farming land would also increase the UK's dependence on imported foodstuffs. The estimates were published as part of the government's consultation into a long awaited 'land use framework' that aims to balance competing demands on England's land, from housing and renewable energy to food production and nature restoration. 'The primary purpose of farming will always be to produce the food that feeds the nation,' said environment secretary Steve Reed. He stressed that the framework would help decision makers protect 'our highest quality agricultural land and make decisions about the long term future of farm businesses.' Alongside the estimates, the government said that any impact on food production from the land use changes could be offset by using technology and sustainable farming techniques to increase crop yields. Successive governments have shied away from embarking on the framework over fears of the backlash it would receive from farmers. NFU president Tom Bradshaw said: 'We must have a land use plan in place, underpinned by sound science and evidence, that has British food at its heart.' But Victoria Vyvyan, president of the Country Land and Business Association, said it could mean farmers being told 'what they are and aren't allowed to grow, plant and rear on their land' and called for safeguards to prevent 'mission creep' from officials. 'Whenever the state gets involved, its tendency is to only become ever more prescriptive,' she added. 'Today, the framework might be light touch, but tomorrow it won't be.' Liberal Democrat MP Alistair Carmichael, chair of the cross party environment, food and rural affairs committee, said the framework was 'long overdue.' 'Farmers need to be able to plan ahead and they and other stakeholders have long called for clarity amidst a myriad of often conflicting demands,' he said. Two thirds of England's land is agricultural, according to official statistics, with 38 per cent made up of arable land and 29 per cent grassland. The country's population is predominantly urban, with 83 per cent of people living in built up areas. England's farmers are already under pressure from the impact of heavy flooding, high inflation and huge cuts to their subsidy payments. Many are also furious about the Labor government's decision to overturn inheritance tax rules, which means some will be liable to pay tax on inherited agricultural and business assets that were previously exempt. Farmers also face a shift to a new postBrexit subsidy scheme that offers them incentives to restore the natural environment, sometimes at the expense of food production. The Environmental Land Management schemes, or ELMs, provide payments for farmers to adopt sustainable farming practices such as soil management, or to take land out of farming altogether. Scotland and Wales have separate devolved systems. The schemes have been criticized by farming groups such as the NFU, which say farmers are being paid to inadvertently lower the country's food production, despite the last government's commitment to maintaining food self sufficiency. The sector had hoped that a land use framework would offer clarity about the intentions behind farming policy. Downing Street said: 'It's important to be clear that this isn't about the government dictating how land is used, or taking valuable, productive land away from

farms. The government recognizes that land is in high demand, and that is why we are starting a national conversation with those involved, whether it be landowners, farmers, developers and more, about how we use it to its full potential, not least for food production.' " (Tenth Of England's Farmland Must Be Rewilded To Hit Climate Targets, Ministers Estimate by Madeleine Speed). Britain today proclaims that a progressive society is a Marxist Labor Party which has launched a class war against successful property owners such as farmers. A progressive society confiscates land from farmers and redistributes it to proletarian migrant scum. A progressive society forbids farmers from passing on their property to future generations and takes everything they own when they die. A progressive society levies a one hundred percent tax on farmers' property, assets, intelligence, craft, know how, skill and ambition, and redistributes the proceeds to the migrant sewers of the world. A progressive society is a leftwing society which has bankrupted and shut down private farming operations so that wild migrant fauna can roam the land. A progressive society is a radical government which seizes farmland, tears up the countryside, and builds palaces for the migrant lords of the underworld. A progressive society is a Marxist, antiWestern, multicultural, mass immigration society. A progressive society is an open borders society which feeds a cancer called migrants, a cancer spreading by the second, with farmland stolen from the people. A progressive society is a throne of unchecked migrant power which expropriates farmers and farming families and sacrifices human rights on the altar of migrant communism: "The leftist Labor Party government's plans to impose inheritance tax on British farmers is nothing more than a class warfare ploy to free up land to build houses for immigrants, Reform UK leader Nigel Farage claimed. Plans from Prime Minister Sir Keir Starmer's government to impose a 20 per cent tax on inherited farming assets above £1 million—as a great many family farms are—have sparked widespread concern among family farms about the future of their ability to maintain legacies." (Farage Accuses Labor Gov't Of Attacking Farmers To Take Land For Migrant Housing by Kurt Zindulka). In 1650 in Britain, a cannon blast was fired and heard throughout the world. It was the cannon blast of the British Agricultural Revolution, and it led to an increase in agricultural production without precedent in history. This unprecedented increase in the food supply increased the population of Britain from 5.5 million in 1700 to 10 million in 1801. In the twenty first century, the miracle of British agriculture has been attacked by the reds and greens of a movement against humanity. In the twenty first century, Britain has commenced contraction into a vanishing point at the hands of its Marxist columns.
